

U.S. May Halt Economic Aid To Israel; Other Steps Seen

Washington—(U.P.)—The United States may halt economic aid to Israel, administration officials said today.

Such action if taken would be part of American-British-French moves to stop the Middle Eastern fighting before it erupts into full scale war.

It is expected that Big Three strategy will be directed primarily through the United Nations at this stage.

Crisis Seid Serious

U.S. officials described the crisis as "very, very serious." It was so serious that President Eisenhower canceled campaign forays into the South and Southwest Wednesday.

American officials favor what they call "stern measures" to stop the fighting at once. This country is poised, if Israel refuses to stop hostilities and the United Nations calls for member state action, to take any of a number of steps:

1. Impose economic sanctions against Israel.
2. Sever diplomatic relations in concert with other nations.
3. Impose a naval blockade against the Jewish state.
