Florida Negro Feared Lynched by Whites

Wildwood, Fla. (U.P.)—Investigators today clung to only a slim hope of finding alive a 39-year-old Negro who was snatched from jail because he had "talked fresh" to a white woman.

The only visible evidence was the torn and blood-stained shirt and felt hat worn by Jesse Woods Saturday night before he disappeared. The clothes heightened fears the Negro was lynched by angry white men.

Capt. Olin Hill, district commander of the Highway Patrol, said blood stains on the back of the hat "indicate a heavy blow on the head."

Sheriff M. H. Brown, who insisted earlier that Woods might be alive and "hiding in fear," said the discovery of the clothes "makes it more likely he is dead."

Employment Declared At All-Time High

Newark, N.J. (U.P.)—Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell reported Tuesday that national employment reached an all-time high for October with 66,200,000 persons holding jobs.

October's unemployment figure was 1.9 million, a rate, Mitchell said, as low as any reported for a peacetime October in history.

The secretary released the figures, compiled by the Labor and Commerce departments, at a press conference here.

Commenting on the AFL-CIO's endorsement of Democratic presidential nominee Adlai E. Stevenson, Mitchell said he did not believe "there is a labor vote."

He pointed out that both the CIO and AFL endorsed Stevenson in 1952, but that President Eisenhower "had high majorities" in industrial states.

Chilly Air Mass Covers Midwest; Temperatures Dip

By UNITED PRESS
A mass of chilly air scooted across the Midwest today and stretched down through the Ohio Valley and into the Central Gulf Coast.

A small belt of warm air extended across the plains states, but this was backed by another cold front that had rolled over the northwest area of the nation. These frosty temperatures were accompanied by snow in the Northern and Central Rockies, as well as in the mountainous regions of the North Western Pacific states.

Areas east of the Mississippi are liberally sprinkled with rain most of the day.

The cold front was detected Tuesday night moving into Minnesota and western Iowa. Mercury in this area plummeted as much as 30 degrees from the previous day's reading.

The eastern half of the nation, along with the areas west of the Rockies, were somewhat warmer Tuesday, but cloudy skies and precipitation acted as a blanket to keep temperatures from rising in the Pacific Northwest.

There was little violent weather reported in the country Tuesday. Light snow glazed mountain tops in the northwest, and rain trickled over the East. Strong winds howled through the Northern Rockies, with gusts up to 50 miles per hour. Northern California regions reported a lousy storm that dumped substantial amounts of rain and heavy snow in the mountains.
