

Stevenson Hopes To Be Century's First President After Having Lost

Editor's note: This is the second in a series of four articles dealing with the presidential candidates in the Nov. 6 general election.

By UNITED PRESS
Adlai Ewing Stevenson hopes to become the first candidate in the 20th century to reach the White House after losing a presidential race.

The last to accomplish this feat was Grover Cleveland, a Democrat, in 1892. Cleveland's running mate was Adlai Ewing Stevenson, grandfather of the present candidate.

Stevenson, the former Illinois governor who lost to President Eisenhower in 1952, has said he suffered a "bad case of hereditary politics." His great-grandfather, Jesse W. Fell, was a staunch Republican and a close adviser and friend of Abraham Lincoln.

Stevenson was a reluctant candidate in 1952, being drafted to head the ticket.

His first campaign against Mr. Eisenhower was marked by the witticisms that became his hallmark and by the literacy of his speeches which appealed to the so-called intellectual or "egg-head" vote.

In the balloting, he was beaten by Mr. Eisenhower by a popular vote of 33,926,252 to 27,314,892 and by an electoral vote of 442 to 89. He carried only nine states.

Stevenson changed his tactics this year. No longer reticent, he announced his candidacy last November, vigorously fought and defeated Sen. Estes Kefauver in most primaries and won the nomination on the first ballot over the combined opposition of Gov. Averell Harriman of New York and former President Truman.

Instead of the amateur "egg-heads" who surrounded him in 1952, Stevenson's campaign this year was directed by James A. Finnegan, a veteran of Pennsylvvania's political wars. His speeches also were geared to appeal to a wider variety of voters.

Chicago Lawyer
The issues that attracted most attention were his statements that it might be possible to end the draft in the foreseeable future and the United States should take the lead in ending H-bomb tests.

Stevenson was born in Los Angeles, Calif., on Feb. 5, 1900. At the age of six, he moved with his family to Bloomington, Ill., the family home town. He attended the Bloomington public schools, the Choate School in Connecticut, and Princeton University, where he was graduated in 1922.

In the closing months of World War I, he served as an apprentice seaman in a Naval Reserve unit.

Stevenson subsequently attended the Harvard and Northwestern law schools and worked part-time as assistant managing editor of the family newspaper, the Bloomington Pantagraph. He still retains a one-quarter interest in the paper from which he derives a good part of his private income.

Stevenson passed the Illinois bar in 1926, and joined a Chicago law firm.

He began his public career in the early days of President Roosevelt's New Deal when, in 1933, he became a special counsel in the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. But in 1935, he resumed his private law practice in Chicago.

With the advent of World War II, Stevenson became counsel and special assistant to Secretary of State Edward R. Stettinius Jr., and James F. Byrnes. For the next three years, he represented this country in various capacities at the United Nations.

Trips Abroad
When he returned to Chicago in 1947, the Democrats were hopeful that charges of scandal in the administration of then Republican Gov. Dwight Green presaged a Democratic sweep the following year.

Stevenson wanted to run for the Senate but agreed to run for governor instead. He surprised his political mentors by waging a fighting campaign and defeating Green by 572,000 votes, the largest plurality ever given to an Illinois governor.

Mr. Truman's decision in 1952 not to seek reelection brought Stevenson, then completing his fourth year as governor, into national prominence. He tried to quash the "Stevenson for president" boom by asserting that he was interested only in another term in the state house.

But in 1952 he was the first choice of Mr. Truman and most other organization leaders for the presidential nomination. Once nominated, he accepted.

His 1952 defeat by Mr. Eisenhower seemed to stimulate rather than diminish Stevenson's interest in politics. He took a trip around the world in 1953 and one to Africa in 1955. He was a frequent critic of the Administration's handling of foreign affairs.

Stevenson's drive for the 1956 nomination became almost unstoppable shortly before the convention when Kefauver, his foe in the primaries, withdrew in his favor. At Chicago, all efforts to halt the Stevenson bandwagon failed and he won easily on the first ballot.

Linn Jail Escapee Returned From L. A.

Albany, Ore.—(U.P.)—James A. Patton, 39, who broke out of the Linn county jail here along with three fellow inmates on Sept. 7, was returned here yesterday by two officers after being arrested in Los Angeles last month.

Patton was immediately arraigned on a charge of assault and robbery in connection with the jail break in which a jailer was robbed and locked in a cell.

One of the four escapees, James E. Bonney, 35, of Silverton, is still at large. All four were awaiting action on appeals from life sentences in Oregon state penitentiary at the time of their escape.

Ernest L. Gibson, 29, was captured near Coos Bay after abducting a Bend taxi driver last month and the fourth escapee, Dan Ott, drowned in the Willamette river near Salem shortly after the break.

Little Girl Turns Over Firecrackers To Police

Knoxville, Tenn.—(U.P.)—A little girl, warned that shooting off firecrackers is illegal here, turned over her stockpile to Police Chief Joe Kinssey with the accompanying letter: "Dear Chief: To keep me out of trouble (on Halloween), I have decided to give you my firecrackers. So, if you decide to shoot them, just remember what you told me."

Body in Car's Trunk Found To Be Mechanic

Clifton, N.J.—(U.P.)—A woman excitedly told police Wednesday she saw a body in the open trunk of a car ahead of her driving down a busy highway. A quick telephone call to an auto agency on the highway and police had the woman's "body" for her—a mechanic crouching in the trunk of the car to detect rattles as it was being road-tested.

Salem Women Among Cairo Evacuees

Salem—(U.P.)—Word received here yesterday by Mrs. G. F. Chambers revealed that two Salem women were among the last persons out of Cairo before commercial air traffic was halted due to the present Middle-East crisis.

Mrs. Chambers said she received word from her sister, Dorothea Steusloff, that she and Dr. Mary Purvine left the area less than one hour before the international airport in the city was closed.

The two women had left here several weeks ago for a tour abroad.

Portland Narcotics Raid Bags Six, Drugs

Portland—(U.P.)—Police here staged one of the most extensive narcotics raids in years last night, arresting six persons and seizing quantities of heroin and marijuana.

Raiding parties, directed by Chief of Police Jim Purcell Jr., made their first arrest late last night and 2 a.m. today the six persons had been picked up and booked on drug counts.

Georgetown's Foreign Service Founder Dies

Washington—(U.P.)—Funeral services will be held Saturday for the Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, S.J., founder of Georgetown University's school of foreign service, who died Wednesday at the age of 71. Walsh, one of America's leading educators, had been hospitalized since December, 1952.

Cowlitz Contempt Action Postponed

Tacoma—(U.P.)—A hearing scheduled for tomorrow on the Cowlitz dams contempt action against the city of Tacoma has been put off indefinitely. Superior Court Judge Charles T. Wright said today.

The issue involves a contention by the State Fisheries and Game Departments that the city violated a court order by doing certain blasting and construction work at the Mayfield site of its $138 million Cowlitz river hydroelectric project.
