The Family Council

Editor's note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor and a woman's editor and two writers. Each article is a summary of an actual report. The Family Council does not give advice; it merely reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and counselors.

Mrs. Mildred R.—My brother takes advantage of our mother.

Tom F.—My sister always tried to spoil everything for me.

Mrs. Mildred R.—My brother and sister-in-law are the fun-loving type. They've been married 12 years, but they don't take life very seriously. When they want to go out for a good time, they just dump their three kids on my mother. I have two very well-behaved children, but I wouldn't think of doing a thing like that.

My mother says she doesn't mind, but when it comes to staying at my house to baby-sit for just one evening, she always manages to back out. The doctor has told my mother to avoid all unnecessary excitement, and I've tried to reason with her and tell her she hasn't the strength to care for three brats. It's no good talking to her though, once she's made up her mind, so I've asked by brother to be more considerate. He refuses to pay any attention to me.

Tom F.—My sister has always tried to spoil everything for me. When we were kids, she always used to break up my toys or cause trouble between me and my friends. When we got older, it was the same thing. If ever she heard of my enjoying myself, she tried to make trouble for me.

I've spoken to my mother about all of this and she says she loves having our children with her. She gets lonesome without them. She doesn't like Mildred's children nearly as well. As soon as Mildred hears that Mother has taken care of our children, she calls Mother and asks her to baby-sit. Sometimes it isn't convenient. Sometimes Mother just doesn't want to, but in any case it's certainly not her fault. Mother told me the doctor said it's important for her to forget herself, and the children help her do this.

The Council: The deep-seated rivalry between this brother and sister appears to be fostered, for some strange reason, by their mother.

Mildred appears much less worried about her mother's health than about whether or not her brother is enjoying more advantages than she is. Tom likes to boast of his advantages and his mother's favoritism toward him and his children. He seems to want to taunt his sister.

Whether or not mother is fostering this rivalry, she is certainly bearing the brunt of the situation. For once in their lives, this brother and sister ought to consider mother first and put their ancient battle in the background.

If the doctor has told an elderly woman to avoid unnecessary excitement, the care of three young children should not be often inflicted on her. Tom ought to recognize this despite his mother's over eagerness to please him.

East Germans Double Guards at Borders

Berlin — (U.P.) — East German Communists, fearful of an uprising, doubled their border guards today and armed them with submachine guns.

West Berlin police headquarters said the reinforced, heavily-armed patrols were sent to the East-West border early this morning after a day of reports an explosion could come any time.

The Communists stationed the patrols at main crossing points on the East-West city border and the Soviet zone border surrounding isolated Berlin.

In the past, border guards in Berlin were armed only with pistols.
