

United Nations Interpreters Are Unseen Stars of Debate

By GAY PAULEY
United Press Correspondent
United Nations, N.Y. — (UPI)—Jeanette Streit Rohatyn is one of the heard but not seen stars of the United Nations these days.

Millions following the meetings of the world organization during the current debate on the Middle East and Hungarian crises recognize her husky voice.

Mrs. Rohatyn, a pretty blue-eyed blonde, is one of a staff of 60 language experts whose job is simultaneous interpretation of speeches in all sessions of the United Nations.

Daughter of writer Clarence Streit, she translates into English the talks given in French or Spanish, two of the five official languages at the many-languaged UN. The others are Russian, Chinese and English. By UN rule, a speaker must use one of the five.

Decision Vote
If you tuned in radio or television coverage of the emergency session of the General Assembly last Thursday when the UN voted for a cease fire in the Middle East, you heard Mrs. Rohatyn's voice behind the voices of the diplomats until the small hours of the morning.

Tension Tells
She said the tension, not the hours, is beginning to tell. An interpreter must catch every word of the speaker and feed it back into a microphone immediately—in another language.

Retired Teachers To Hear Reports
Jackson County unit, Retired Teachers' association, will meet Monday, November 12, at the home of Mrs. Austin Murray, 1708 Lenora drive, at 1:30 p.m.

"Thankfully, said Mrs. Rohatyn, 'I've suffered no laryngitis... yet.'"

The most difficult assignment she can remember was the international atomic conference in Geneva.

"I called for interpreting one highly technical speech after another," she said. "A mistake could have meant consequences I shudder to think about."

Learn Something From The "Other Woman"

"I've just found there's 'another woman,'" wails Martha, and I've always thought our marriage was good—maybe not what you might call thrilling after ten years, but reliable and steady. What sends John gallivanting suddenly after another woman?

"I've suspected that Bob was more than mere friends with his stenographer," says Jewell, dabbing tear-swollen eyes. "Now I have proof in the letters I found in his pocket. And I've tried to be a good sensible wife! What ever made him tired of me? How have I failed?"

"I've been married 23 years," writes a correspondent, "and now Jim tells me he wants his freedom, to marry my best friend."

"Every hour of every day, after a year or a score of years, a marriage breaks or shows signs of shattering. Every day thousands of people say to their partners, 'I don't want to continue our partnership. Let's call it off.'"

The new way to add a touch of onion to a mixed green salad is to moisten instant minced onion in the vinegar and let stand a few minutes. Toss greens with oil in your usual way. Add the onion-vinegar mixture and toss again. The instant minced onion saves time and adds fresh onion flavor.

Around Hollywood

Aline Mosby

Hollywood—UPI—Hollywood turned out so many ambitious pictures this year that the next Oscar derby will have an over-crowded starting gate.

Movie-makers threw every thing from the Bible to "War and Peace" at citizens to pry them from television sets during 1956. The results will be a long list of "also rans" when the Academy Award nominations are listed next February.

The studios have until Dec. 31 to put up their prize pictures for consideration by showing them in the Los Angeles area. But already Hollywood columnists who have sat through previews during the year are betting on the probable nominees.

Best Actor Nominations
So far top contenders for the best actor nominations are Burt Lancaster, "The Rainmaker," Kirk Douglas, "Just for Life," Paul Newman, "Somebody Up There Likes Me," Charlton Heston, "The Ten Commandments," and possibly Rock Hudson, "Giant," and Gary Cooper, "Friendly Persuasion."

The likely females to sweat it out for the best actress prize are Deborah Kerr, "Tea and Sympathy," Jennifer Jones, "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," Dorothy McGuire, "Friendly Persuasion," Katharine Hepburn, "The Rainmaker," Elizabeth Taylor, "Giant," and Audrey Hepburn, "War and Peace."

Biblical Film Popular
The most popular entrant for the best picture Oscar appears to be "The Ten Commandments," which, despite its excesses and anticlimactic ending furnished by the Bible, turned out to be almost as great as its publicity. But "Friendly Persuasion" and "Giant" are running neck-and-neck.

Other possible nominees are "The King and I," "War and Peace," "Just for Life," "Teahouse of the August Moon," "Moby Dick" and "The Rainmaker."

"Around the World in 80 Days" appears to be the smash hit of the year as far as both critical raves and boxoffice is concerned. But one voice points out the movie is "more of a show, like Cinerama." It probably will be nominated only in technical categories.

Spread a layer of vanilla cream pudding in the bottom of tart shells and top with sliced canned cling peach halves round side up. Drizzle with strawberry preserves for one of the most handsome and tastiest of all quick desserts.
