

85th Congress To Be Faced With Many of Same Pressures From Lobbyists of 1955-56

Washington (CQ) — Congress in 1957 will find itself under many of the same pressures from lobbyists that the 84th Congress felt in 1955-56.

Washington's lobby legion — whose registered members outnumber Congressmen by about 6:1 — has been waiting for Tuesday's election to prepare its plans to push or obstruct major legislation that will face the 85th Congress.

The last Congress pleased some lobbyists. Efforts in favor of passage of some farm legislation, the Colorado Reclamation Project, social security, highways and limited public housing were successful, at least for the time being, when legislation was enacted. Some groups were dissatisfied with the measures and may press for revision.

But lobbyists again will concentrate on eight major projects that were not enacted by the 84th Congress:

Federal aid to education, exemption of natural gas producers from federal regulation, veterans pensions, postage rate increases, federal help for peacetime atomic energy, rigid farm price supports, federal development of Hells Canyon and U. S. membership in the Organization for Trade Cooperation.

Congressional Quarterly's survey of 84th Congress lobbying activity and preliminary plans for 85th Congress pressures shows these plans:

The National Education Association again will press for federal aid for states in need of school buildings. Its 1955-56 efforts went for naught when a bill to provide that aid was defeated in the House after adoption of an amendment to deny federal funds to segregated schools. NEA state leaders will meet Dec. 6-9 in Chicago to discuss ways to get the segregation amendment in a separate bill so all school aid will not depend on it.

The natural gas industry will make another try at getting legislation to exempt its producers from federal regulation. In the 84th Congress, both the House and Senate passed such a bill after a bitter fight among opposing lobbies. President Eisenhower vetoed the measure Feb. 14 because of "highly questionable activities" of some of those pressuring for passage of the bill. The Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Assn. is optimistic over the chances of a new bill if the gas industry gets Committee endorsement and the backing of the President.

ahead of time. A spokesman for the United Auto Workers (AFL-CIO) said "we'll fight as hard as ever" against ending federal natural gas regulation when the issue reappears.

Veterans Groups To Split

Veterans groups will be split once again over how pensions should be increased. The American Legion — with about 60 Senators and 240 Representatives in its membership — wants higher pensions for disabled veterans whether their injuries resulted from military service or not. The American Veterans should be on service-connected disability. The AVC feels pensions for disabled soldiers and their survivors should be based on the cost of living instead of fixed amounts. The House passed a Legion-backed pensions bill June 27, but the measure died in the Senate.

Another attempt to raise the price of postage stamps will be made in 1957. The National Assn. of Postmasters will meet in mid-January to decide the best way to push the bill through. The House July 6 voted 217-166 to increase postage rates but the measure never came up on the Senate floor. The National Assn. of Direct Selling Co.'s opposed the increases in 1956 and intends to fight them again next year.

The Cooperative League of the U.S.A. reports it is working with other public power groups to "refine" an unsuccessful 1956 bill that would have provided for federal construction of $400 million worth of demonstration atomic power plants. The National Coal Assn., which opposed the bill in the 84th Congress, has not changed its mind. The atomic bill passed the Senate on a vote of 49-40, but was defeated in the House 191-203.

Barring a sudden rise in farm prosperity, the old debate of flexible vs. rigid farm price supports will go on again in 1957. The American Farm Bureau Federation will fight for continued flexible supports while the National Farmers Union will press for high rigid ones.

Hells Canyon Argument

Although construction of a federal high dam at Hells Canyon was defeated July 19 in the Senate by a vote of 41-51 and never got to the House floor, the National Hells Canyon Association will continue to argue for the project. An Association spokesman said most of its money will go into litigation to prevent the Idaho Power Co. from building three low dams near the canyon. The Federal Power Commission in 1955 licensed the private power company to build the dams.

The Committee for a National Trade Policy again will push for a bill to make the U.S. a member of the Organization for Trade Cooperation. CNTP feels the OTC would provide the U.S. with a mechanism for settling international trade disputes. The Nation-Wide Committee of Industry, Agriculture and Labor on Import-Export Policy, which has successfully opposed the idea, says it would be a dangerous delegation of Congressional authority to an international body. The OTC bill did not come up for a vote in either the House or Senate in 1955 or 1956.

Negotiations Start For Elevator Sale

Portland — (UP) — Final negotiations were reported under way Saturday for sale of the big Albina grain elevators and the dock at Swan Island here by the Union Pacific railroad to Quaker Oats Company.

Portland grain circles said the value was "in excess of $1 million." The 650,000 bushel elevators and 400-foot dock have been under lease-option to Quaker Oats since 1946.

Paul H. Rimmerman, western division manager for Quaker Oats in Los Angeles was in Portland for negotiations. He confirmed that the sale was expected to be closed within a month.

Quaker Oats plans to discontinue production of formula feeds at its Portland plant. But it will continue grain operations throughout the northwest and cereal storage and sales from headquarters here.

Rimmerman said: "We see continued Pacific Northwest expansion and are preparing for it now, and no negotiation price can be announced yet."

The warehouse and dock cover 36,000 square feet.

Britons, Cypriots Are Killed in Violence

Nicosia, Cyprus — (UP) — Eleven Britons and six Greek Cypriots were killed in Nicosia in the worst week of violence since the emergency on Cyprus began nearly two years ago, it was disclosed Saturday.

It was the biggest seven-day death toll since the Cypriot movement for union with Greece erupted into violence.

Circles said the increased underground activity lent credence to belief extremists were trying to take advantage of Britain's pre-occupation with Egypt.
