On Hearing Aids

I was just reading a book "Let's Hear It," by Dr. Frankel, who describes the difficulties the encounter when he became hard of hearing, and then went on for years trying to bluff it out and make people think he could hear when often he was just guessing.

Now he can stop to pass the time of day happily with a friend; he can go to parties, and when someone asks him a question he can answer it without guessing; he can go to lectures and concerts; he can enjoy music! Again he likes people and people like him. Best of all, he "likes and respects himself."

As the doctor says, a deaf person had better not get the idea that the minute he puts on a hearing-aid, his troubles will be over. When one has lost the habit of hearing he has forgotten many sounds he must learn little by little to hear well again. He has lost the habit of listening, and hence he must learn again to pay attention. The doctor feels it is important that the hearing aid be used all day. It may require much patience to get adjusted to the mechanism; with it there are many sounds coming into the ear that a man doesn't want to hear, and he has to learn to ignore them. The important thing is to get over one's feeling of conspicuousness because one has a button in one's ear or a cord back of one's ear. Why worry about that when millions of people are wearing glasses? I have worn heavy glasses since I was 9, and I don't know I have lived one. Without them my life would be dull and stupid.

Eventually Dr. Frankel decided he couldn't get by any longer, bluffing as he was, so he bought a hearing aid. The result was so delightful to him that now he writes, appealing to all the millions of somewhat deaf men and women to forget their pride and go out and try a hearing aid. As he says, "Why should we sentence ourselves to solitary confinement in a prison of resentment and self-pity when we can be free?" "In order to feel secure and... glad that we are living, we need to be in close... communication with other human beings. When our communication lines break down, we become apprehensive. Our... world seems... unreal and... menacing. Unable to rely on one part of ourselves we lose confidence in ourselves as a whole. Emmeshed in the guilty web of our own continued pretending, mis-statements, and accidental truths, we grow suspicious of the sincerity of others. Dozens of small daily humiliations batter at our egos and bruise them."

Whole Life Changed
Dr. Frankel tells how his whole life changed the day he told his family that they could turn down the radio to a normal volume of sound, and could stop shouting. He no longer was going to be a selfish and demanding grown-up child. At last he had faced his problem and had solved it.

Strange As It Seems

There are about 2,000 different languages spoken in the world, nearly half of which are native to North and South America.

The male gorilla has charge of the food and does it out to the other members of the tribe.

When General Israel Putnam of Revolutionary War fame was challenged to a duel and given his choice of weapons, he selected a keg of gunpowder set with a lit candle.

His adversary withdrew his challenge when he learned that the last one to remain at the scene would be considered the winner!
