

Far Westerners To Play Important Part in Organization of New Senate

By A. ROBERT SMITH
Mail Tribune Correspondent
Washington — The Far West promises to play an increasingly important role in the leadership of the U.S. Senate during the upcoming 85th Congress. Four of the important committees are expected to be headed by western senators and it seems generally agreed that Sen. Mike Mansfield (D-Mont.) will be the new Democratic whip, replacing the defeated Sen. Earle Clements of Kentucky.

If Democrats organize the Senate, as now appears likely, the far westerners heading committees will be:

Appropriations — Sen. Carl Hayden (D-Ariz.).
Interior — Sen. James E. Murray (D-Mont.).
Interstate and Foreign Commerce — Sen. Warren G. Magnuson (D-Wash.).
Public Works — Sen. Dennis Chavez (D-N. Mex.).
If Republicans should get control of the Senate, the only westerner to become a committee chairman would be Sen. George Malone (R-Nev.), who would head the Interior Committee now that Sen. Eugene D. Millikin (R-Colo.), has retired.

13 Western Democrats
Another factor in the picture of the new Senate is that the 11

western states will be represented by 13 Democrats and nine Republicans as compared with an 11-11 split in the 84th Congress. Oregon, Washington, Montana and New Mexico have all now elected Democrats to both their Senate seats occupied by Republicans. Idaho, Nevada, Arizona, Wyoming and Colorado have one senator from each party.

Frank Church, Idaho's new Democratic senator who beat Republican Sen. Herman Welker, is expected to get a good break in both committee assignments and seniority. There is an opening on the Interior Committee, which handles all irrigation and power bills.

Church, the only newcomer from the Pacific Northwest this year, will also be placed ahead of two other newcomers in the incoming Senate in the seniority list. This is because presumably Church will enter the Senate when it convenes Jan. 3, whereas Sen-elect Frank Lausche of Ohio has said he will await the expiration of his governorship term in mid-January before taking his seat, and Sen. Price Daniel of Texas has been elected governor of his state, but won't give up his Senate seat until after the Congress has convened.

Other Vacancies
Other committees that now have vacancies due to the election turnover are foreign relations, appropriations, finance, interstate and foreign commerce, labor and public welfare, banking and currency, agriculture, judiciary, government operations, public works, and post office and civil service.

There may be little change in the committee posts held by Oregon and Washington senators, because they all have first class assignments now. Some will move up in rank on those committees.

Sen. Magnuson has not only his chairmanship of Interstate and Foreign Commerce, but he is on the Appropriations Committee which determines funds for all western projects. He ranks 8th among the Democrats on that committee.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson (D-Wash.) is on Atomic Energy, Armed Services, Interior and Government Operations. If anything, he might wish to be relieved of duty on Government Operations to concentrate on the others to which he is strongly devoted.

Sen. Wayne Morse (D-Ore.) will move up to 6th ranking Democrat on Foreign Relations and 6th on Banking and Currency. He has said he plans also to keep his seat on the District of Columbia Committee.

Sen. Richard L. Neuberger (D-Ore.) is now 6th ranking Democrat on the Interior and the Post Office committees, and 5th ranking on Public Works.

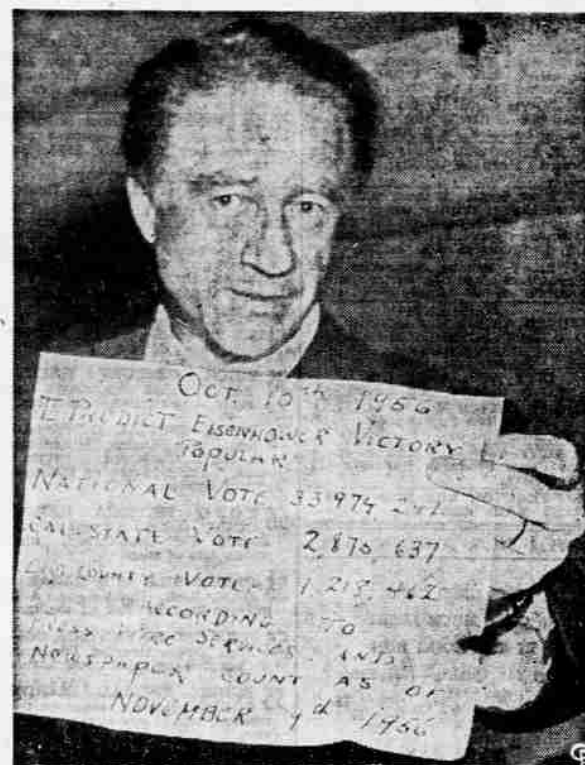

Four Jackson county juveniles were arrested Tuesday on minor charges and released to their parents with instructions to appear before county juvenile authorities, according to Medford police.

A 15-year-old Phoenix boy and two Medford boys, aged 17 and 16, were arrested after admitting to police they broke a gum machine on South Central ave. between Main and Eighth sts. on Nov. 12, officers said.

A 12-year-old Medford boy was arrested after he admitted to police the theft of 50 cents from the Medford fire department lounge Monday, it was reported.

The Family Council

Editor's note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor, a women's editor and two writers. Each article is a summary of an actual report. The Family Council does not give advice; it merely reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and counselors.

Mrs. C. D. — Our daughter is persecuted — we should move away.

Mr. C. D. — We can't protect Penny all the time.

Mrs. C. D. — We recently moved to a new neighborhood, a much better one than we had lived in before.

Since we have been here, our 11-year-old daughter has been bitterly unhappy. She claims the other children do not like her. One girl, in particular, is making fun of my daughter's clothes, her mannerisms, her way of talking.

My daughter is pretty, well spoken and nicely dressed. She looks as good as any of the other children. I just can't understand it and I have tried to speak to this girl to see why she hates my daughter so much. I could get nothing out of her. But my daughter has been so unhappy. I feel that the only thing to do is to move and get her away from this painful situation.

Mr. C. D. — My wife is making a mountain of a molehill. You can't control these situations kids get into. We can't go around protecting Penny all the time and moving to new neighborhoods to make things easier for her.

I think my wife ought to go to this other little girl's parents and tell them their daughter is giving ours a hard time. This child's parents must be decent people to live in this neighborhood, and I'm sure we can straighten things out with them.

This isn't the first time this kind of thing has happened with Penny. She used to get into all kinds of crazy things in our old neighborhood. They weren't ordinary kids' battles, but long persecutions that had Penny constantly miserable.

The Council: Mr. C. D. is right that the family cannot keep moving to put Penny in a more comfortable situation. But he is wrong in his idea that going to the other child's parents will help. Even if they have the best intentions, they will be unable to control their daughter's actions when she is with her friends.

The fact Penny has been in similar trouble before suggests she somehow provokes this kind of situation. In order to get at the roots of the problem her parents will have to question her very carefully about what happens when these things arise. They should encourage her to be absolutely honest about what she said or did and what the other children said or did. It is possible Penny herself will come to understand what the difficulty is, once she is taught to examine these episodes.

It would also be helpful if Penny's mother can observe her daughter when she is playing with her friends. She should try to put aside her desire to protect her child above all. It is more important to understand how the unhappy situations arise. Mr. C. D. should encourage Penny to invite her friends to their home and should make her observations as unobtrusively as possible.

It is possible Penny has just been unlucky in her choice of friends. In this case, she can probably be guided to children with whom she gets along better.

You buy a refrigerator only two or three times in your lifetime.
Yet you don't hesitate to buy one without getting so much as a look at the intricate "works" that makes it run.
How do you dare make such an important purchase without having an expert check it over for you? What makes you so sure you're getting your money's worth when you say, "I'll take that one?"
The answer's obvious. You look for the brand name on the refrigerator—your "guarantee." You've learned to follow this first rule of safe and sound buying:
A good brand is your best guarantee
No matter what kind of product you want to buy, you know a good brand won't let you down. You know the maker stands back of it—guarantees it. And so, when you buy a good brand you know you're right.
Read this newspaper to find out which are the good brands (and the stores that sell them.) The more good brands you know, the surer you are about all your shopping.
