

FLAGS FLY FROM STATUE—A Hungarian flag, trailing a black mourning band, and an American flag wave from torch of the Statue of Liberty after several men broke two locks and gained entrance into the monument. Both flags, about five feet by twenty in size, flew for about ten minutes before officials took them down.

27 Employees Disciplined In State Department Work

Washington—(U.P.)—The State Department disciplined 27 employees during the last three years under its security program, but no one was fired. In addition, four employees were dismissed from the department under President Eisenhower's government-wide loyalty program.

The State Department started its security program in October, 1953, under the administration of Scott McLeod. The program was designed to help clean up what Republicans called a "mess in the State Department" left over from Democratic administrations.

An information bulletin made available to the United Press showed that in three years the department's security offices recommended 33 disciplinary actions, including nine letters of reprimand and 24 temporary suspensions.

For One Day
Actually, only 18 department employees were suspended for infractions of security rules and nine others were sent reprimands. None was fired.

Informed sources said most of the suspensions were for one day. The maximum could have been 30 days.

The disciplinary action was meted out for such rule infractions as leaving security papers on desks at night and forgetting to lock security files at night. There are about 12,000 personnel working for the State Department here and abroad.

In all, the bulletin said, the security office checked 967 violations during the three-year period. Apparently the bulk of the violations did not warrant disciplinary action.

20 Won Appeals
The security office explained that first violations "are ordinarily acknowledged by a letter from the office of security to the employee," but no immediate record is made in his personnel record. If a second violation occurs within two years, both violations are recorded in the personnel record.

The bulletin said that "relatively few employees of the Department of State or the foreign service are responsible for repeated violations."

It said that "less than one per cent of all employees commit 12 per cent of the violations."

The security office also said some 50 persons involved in security cases have appealed the cases. About 20 won their point. The security office said that in such successful appeal information was brought out which was not originally available to the State Department.

The order of the Purple Heart was established in 1782.

Crops totaling more than 1,000 bushels per acre have been harvested in some of Michigan's upper peninsula fields, setting production records for non-irrigated potato acreages.

Norris Letters Given To Library

Washington—(U.P.)—A collection of letters of the late Sen. George Norris of Nebraska has been given to the Library of Congress by Mrs. John P. Robertson of Washington, daughter of the famous lawmaker.

The letters, dating from 1885 to 1913, were found last year in the attic of a Nebraska office building by members of the senator's family and have joined the main body of Norris papers the senator himself gave the library.

The letters reveal the thoughts of Norris as he contended himself with the depression period of the 1890's, Nebraska politics in general and the 1908 campaign when the Democrats under William Jennings Bryan swept the state, almost upsetting Norris, then a Republican congressman.

It was elected in that campaign, the letters reveal, "by the narrow margin of 22 votes and my district comprises 19 counties."

The letters also present the senator's viewpoint as a senatorial candidate in the election campaign of 1912 when the Republican party split wide open, fatally dividing its support between Sen. President William Howard Taft and presidential aspirant Theodore Roosevelt to the benefit of Democratic candidate Woodrow Wilson.

The letters concern, too, Norris' fight to curb the then almost unlimited powers of the speaker of the House of Representatives. As one constituent put it, in this fight Norris chose "to be a live Republican in preference to a mullet head regular."

Sixth Army Reserves To Get Plan by Mail

San Francisco—(U.P.)—Army reservists in the Sixth Army area will soon receive advice by mail regarding personal planning for service in future emergencies.

Lt. Gen. Robert N. Young, Sixth Army commander, said the information was being distributed by the Department of the Army and was incorporated with a revision of existing regulations for calling up reservists in the event of an emergency.

The revision says that reserve members may be called to active duty "without warning." It was suggested that reservists keep their personal affairs in order at all times.

No Clues Available In Widow's Slaying

Pittsburgh—(U.P.)—Allegheny County Detective Chief Henry Pieper said today authorities were without suspects in the hatchet-slaying of attractive 41-year-old Sewickley Twp. widow Helen Zubryd.

Elmer Skiles Jr., 36 and James Skiles, 23, questioned day-long Wednesday in connection with the brutal murder, were released Wednesday night after "they proved they had nothing to do with the killing," Pieper said. The brothers lived about 100 yards from Mrs. Zubryd's home.

Mrs. Zubryd's body, a hatchet imbedded in her forehead, was found in the basement of her home Tuesday night by her 8-year-old son, Charles. The boy made the grisly discovery when he returned from a 45-minute visit at the home of a neighbor. Authorities said she had not been sexually attacked.

Mrs. Zubryd lived alone with her son since the death of her husband a year ago. She had been employed as a domestic in neighboring Edgewood and Sewickley homes.

Prosperity Making Americans Lazy

Ithaca, N.Y.—(U.P.)—Prosperity is making Americans lazy and causing fatness to be the country's major nutritional problem, according to Prof. Charlotte M. Young of the Cornell University school of nutrition.

She said, however, that the nutritional aspects of obesity are secondary to its economic, social, cultural and emotional effects. She suggested four remedies:

(1) Better mental health facilities to correct defects that lead to compulsive eating; (2) education in using leisure time to reduce boredom, especially in middle-aged women; (3) re-education of eating patterns; (4) more physical activities for all ages.

'Shifty-Eyed People Declared Numerous

Berkeley, Calif.—(U.P.)—University of California scientists here hold that "shifty-eyed" individuals are more numerous than most people suppose—in fact, it appears that everybody is shifty-eyed.

The revelation, however, has nothing to do with shyness or feelings of guilt.

The university researchers say that this is due to a remarkable characteristic of eyes shared by everyone. The eyes are not still even when a person thinks he is looking steadily at an object. A small involuntary tremor, occurring from 80 to 120 times per second, is going on continually.

A majority of visual scientists believe this fact is valuable or even essential for vision.
