Hawaiians Paint Trees White for Christmas

Although many Hawaiians have never seen ice except in the form of a cube, they paint their Christmas trees white to simulate snow.

Christmas dinner is an elaborate affair—but one reserved for the intimate family group, behind locked doors and drawn blinds.

Hawaiian hospitality is such that were the doors not locked and the blinds not drawn, strangers would wander in, expecting the host and hostess to offer open-house hospitality of food and drinks. However, inexpensive gifts are exchanged by everyone.

The Medical Roundup

by Walter Alvarez

Emeritus Consultant in Medicine, Mayo Clinic
Emeritus Professor of Medicine, Mayo Foundation

The Mentally Retarded Child

Every week my heart goes to the many women who write to say that they have a child whose brain has not developed. Usually they say that they have had him to half-a-dozen prominent physicians or children's specialists or great clinics.

Dr Alvarez

Every one of the physicians consulted said the child was perfect except for his underdeveloped brain, and that there wasn't anything that they knew of to do. Some tried a long series of shots of some medicine, but it did no good. Now, the mother wants to know if she and her husband should put a mortgage on their farm and travel far to some great university or some well-known clinic. They also want to know if anywhere in the country there is a place where these children are being treated and cured.

I have to answer sadly that I know of no place where children with a defective brain can be cured. There is only about one type of retarded child who can be greatly helped and that is the cretin, or the child whose thyroid gland never developed. Any good children's specialist should recognize such a child on sight, and in a few weeks should have him much brighter. For most retarded children, we physicians have no medicine which will make the defective part of the brain develop.

I often beg the unhappy parents to face facts and stop spending all their savings on a hopeless quest. I want their money to be saved for the care and education of some bright children they have. Every week I see people who had never felt they could afford to spend any of their small savings on a college education for their brilliant son, but are now spending every cent of those savings trying to cure an idiot or a hopelessly insane child. Any good doctor could tell them that they are throwing their money away, and that soon, when their last dollar is gone, they will have to put the child in a state institution.

Many an unhappy and puzzled mother asks, "Why should this terrible thing have happened to us? My husband and I are sensible and intelligent persons, and we have three other children who are well and a joy to us." Perhaps on questioning them I find that they have an uncle or an aunt or a couple of cousins or nephews who are feebleminded or insane; or I learn that their eldest boy, on entering the army, promptly cracked up and is now in a V. A. mental hospital.

Sometimes the parents will say that the defective child seemed normal until he was 2 years old. Then he had an unusually severe attack of measles with much headache and stiffness of his neck. Perhaps for a while the child was out of his head, or he had a convulsion or two, and the doctor said he had a brain fever (encephalitis).

When I get an electroencephalogram made—a record of the tiny electric currents formed in the child's brain—it shows that a part of the brain was so badly damaged by the virus or the brain fever that it stopped growing. Now, years later, I cannot hope to make it grow, any more than I can expect to make a child's shrunken arm or leg grow.

As I was writing this I was consulted by a lovely couple—an old professor and his wife—retired on a small pension—who are spending several hundred dollars a month on the treatment of an insane grandson. Soon all of their savings will be gone, and they will face a bleak future. They are acting in this foolish way after having been told by the experts in a good state mental hospital that the youth is a degenerated schizophrenic who hasn't shown any tendency to recover after being given scores of electroshocks, many insulin shocks, and large doses of the so-called wonder drugs. Now the grandparents have put the lad in a private sanatorium and are paying a psychoanalyst $25 a day to drop in every morning and listen to his ravings.

I know I will now get many letters from unhappy mothers who will say, "How could you say such discouraging things? We will give our last penny to any doctor who will give us hope. We want hope and will gladly pay for it." My answer is that I would as soon sell them groundless hope as I would sell them some stock in a dry "oil well;" I just could not do it.

I often marvel at this human desire for hope, and the foolish things it makes people do. I remember receiving, some months ago, a remarkable letter from a fine-well-educated man. He said that when his mother was dying with inoperable cancer he took her to a notorious quack who guaranteed a cure for several hundred dollars down. The man who wrote me said his mother lived only a month, but he now feels the money was well spent because, during those last days she whom he loved seemed happy, confident that as the quack said, she was getting better. Remarkable is my correspondent's statement that although he knows the quack is a crook, he likes him, and is so grateful to him that he still keeps sending him patients.

Another man, a brilliant lawyer, when he was going blind, and no eye specialist would promise him anything, went to a quack and paid $5,000 for a guaranteed cure. Later, when he quit taking the fellow's silly, supposedly electronic treatment, he told me he was not sore at the quack who fleeced him. He said, "Doctor, when you are going blind you will gladly pay $5,000 to the one man in the world who will promise you a cure."

Dr. Alvarez hopes his readers will understand that it would be impossible for him to answer requests for information or to attempt to diagnose by mail.

Of interest to all parents will be a debate on TV next week.
