Florida Doing Bold Planning

Tallahassee, Fla. - (U.P.) - Florida and its state-operated universities are doing some bold planning in an effort to become a training base for atomic scientists of the future.

Spurred by atom-minded Gov. Leroy Collins, the state has an active nuclear energy commission hard at work on a program for the 1957 legislature which would set Florida in on the ground floor of planning for the nuclear age.

The goal is to make Florida the center of nuclear and aeronautic industry. The starting point is to gear the University of Florida and Florida State University to teach all skills needed in the nuclear field.

The University of Gainesville plans a $12,000,000 Florida center of nuclear science and industrial development to concentrate on the teaching of technical sciences.

Subjects will include radiation biology, health physics, tracer nutrition, radiation and agricultural chemistry, nuclear calculations and applied mathematics, nuclear process engineering and nuclear and rocket propulsion.

Florida planners feel the need for scientists in these fields is so great that assistance will be available from federal and industrial sources. The center would be of value to the entire South as there is no other such concentration of teaching skills and tools on a single campus in the area.

The state development commission has launched a drive to attract nuclear industry to Florida.

Washington - (U.P.) - Dan T. Smith, special assistant to Treasury Secretary George M. Humphrey, says it apparently will be necessary to postpone automatic tax reductions on cigarettes, beer, automobiles and certain other items for another year.

Desegregation in Deep South To Take 50 Years, Educator Claims

Chicago - (U.P.) - A noted Negro educator from the Deep South predicts that desegregation will take 50 years.

"It's bound to be a slow process," said Dr. Laurence Jones, the "little professor of Piney Woods."

"It's an educational problem, really. And there's a whole set of long-standing social mores and customs involved."

Jones, interviewed here while on a speaking tour, said desegregation is "at a standstill now, except for the border states."

But he said one good by-product of the desegregation controversy has been the building of some excellent schools for Negroes in the South.

"Some of them are the equal of schools anywhere," he said. Piney Woods Unique Jones' own school is the Piney Woods Country Life School, a unique establishment he founded in 1909 with little more than an idea and faith.

The school, near Braxton, Miss., serves one of the poorest sections in the United States. Jones started it literally on a pine stump, with three illiterate Negro pupils and $1.65 each.

The school now occupies 1,700 acres, consists of several buildings, has educated 6,000 Negroes and has a current enrollment of 500.

It's a boarding school, encompassing grade school, high school and junior college.

Most of the pupils have no money and pay their tuition by helping with the chores. Through the years Jones, now 71, has financed the school's operation and growth with his own fundraising efforts.

A couple of years ago he appeared on the television show "This Is Your Life" and viewers contributed a cool million dollars to the backwoods school. Trade Study Required Jones said the school emphasizes practical instruction. Each pupil must study at least two trades, in addition to the customary subjects.

"Too many Negroes are coming north with no education and no skill or trade," he said. "They come up here to the big industrial cities like Chicago with high hopes, only to learn there's little demand for unskilled labor."

"What it adds up to is the South dumping its problem on the North."
