Washington—Democratic Mayor David L. Lawrence of Pittsburgh on party platform: "If you have a platform, you ought to follow it up with a legislative program, not just throw it out after you are defeated in an election."

Hollywood—A hospital physician on the condition of actor Humphrey Bogart who checked in for the third time this year: "There's nothing to worry about."

Washington—Harry S. Ashmore, editor of the Arkansas Gazette, on the eventual success of desegregation by law: "Powerful forces are working to preserve segregation, but in every significant test for the last 20 years, the forces working against segregation have proved stronger."

The Family Council

Editor's note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor, a women's editor and two writers. Each article is a summary of an actual report. The Family Council does not give advice; it merely reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and counselors.

Mrs. P. O.—I want to invite myself to my son's home.

Mr. P. O.—It will just make trouble.

Mrs. P. O.—Our son was married several months ago and moved to his wife's town, quite a distance from our home. Since the marriage he and his wife have visited us twice, and we have, of course, been very happy to have them.

They have not yet invited us to their home, however, I am quite unhappy about this because I would love to see them more often and am naturally curious to see their apartment and how they are living.

I feel that I ought to just invite myself, since they don't seem to have enough sense as to how to behave. My husband says he won't go unless invited and doesn't think I should.

Mr. P. O.—My wife and I were opposed to this marriage for various reasons and I am afraid that we are not very welcome in this home.

Despite our early opposition, we accepted the situation when we saw that our son was determined, and did our best to make our daughter-in-law feel welcome in our home. We feel that if she makes our son happy, that is the only important thing.

If we impose ourselves in their home, our son might consider us responsible for any trouble that might arise between him and his wife. I'm afraid that our daughter-in-law just feels hostile toward us because of what happened in the beginning and nothing we can do will help.

The Council: The conduct of this young couple is certainly unusual and the relationship with the parents seems very strained.

The fact that the son has not even discussed the possibility of a visit from the parents may indicate that there is already difficulty in the marriage. If this is the case, it would not be advisable for the mother to spring a visit on the couple or invite herself.

It might be a better idea for the parents to invite the couple for another visit and for the father to open a discussion privately with his son. He might simply explain that he and the boy's mother would like to see more of the young couple and that they could make a visit to the couple's home if they would be welcome.

Such a discussion might bring the son to unburden his marital problem, if there is one. If there is no problem and he loves his parents, he will be forced to take up the issue with his wife. If the wife opposes a visit from his parents, a serious argument might result, but it is one that the son will have to face eventually if he does not want to cut off his ties with his parents.

These parents show no desire to hurt the marriage in any way and they should not feel guilty about forcing the issue a bit. It is an issue that the son will have to meet for the sake of his own happiness and peace of mind.

Brooklyn Diocese Archbishop Succumbs

New York—(U.P.)—Archbishop Thomas E. Molloy, 71, bishop of the Roman Catholic diocese of Brooklyn, died Monday night after a short illness.

Archbishop Molloy had been seriously ill since he suffered a stroke and an attack of pneumonia on Nov. 15.

The title of archbishop was conferred on him in 1951 as a personal honor "ad personam" by Pope Pius XII in recognition of his service to the church. It is distinguished from the title archbishop held by Francis Cardinal Spellman who heads the Catholic province of New York with its archdiocese of New York and the dioceses of Albany, Brooklyn, Buffalo, Ogdensburg, Rochester and Syracuse.

Distillery Representative Talks at Roundtable Meet

Gerry Pearson, public relations manager of the Hood River Distillers, Inc., yesterday discussed the possibilities of culled peeps as an ingredient for vodka, if a vodka processing plant should ever be erected in southern Oregon.

She spoke at a luncheon meeting of the Jackson County Chamber of Commerce Roundtable at the Jackson hotel. The Hood River Distillers, she pointed out, is the only registered distillery in the northwest and the only vodka processing plant in the world that specializes in "pear neutral spirit."

HRD uses Oregon products and labor exclusively, Miss Pearson said, and pays the state about $60,000 in taxes annually from vodka sales.

In 1957, she said, the country will consume about 9,000,000 gallons of vodka. Of this amount, about 35 per cent is expected to be consumed in California.

Discussing a survey taken in Hood River by the distillery, stated that about one of every 10 citizens there drink HRD vodka. The popularity of vodka in the west, Miss Pearson said, is typical of the rise in popularity of the drink all over the country.

One reason for the popularity of the vodka, she explained, is its "breathless after effect."

The trend in this country is towards a lighter type beverage anyway, she said.

Another reason for its popularity, she said, is that it only contains 18 calories, less than any other alcoholic beverage. There is no Russian vodka being marketed in this country now, she added.

Cleveland—(U.P.)—Tentative agreement has been reached between bargaining committees for the Cleveland Photoengravers union and the Cleveland Newspaper Publishers Association.

Salem—(U.P.)—Mrs. Harold Duncan, Carleton, has been named as a member of the Yamhill County Public Welfare Commission.

$5,000,000 in federal taxes next year. This explains the company slogan, which is "Drink Your Way Out of Debt," she said.

Pedestrians Not Always Protected By Law, Chief Says

Many people are under the erroneous impression that pedestrians have the right of way at all times regardless of circumstances, according to Charles P. Champlin, Medford police chief.

Drawing attention to national pedestrian safety month, now nearing an end, Champlin quoted right-of-way regulations as stated in Oregon motor vehicle laws.

Law Quoted "A driver must yield the right of way to a pedestrian crossing within any marked crosswalk or within any unmarked crosswalk at an intersection," he pointed out. If a pedestrian is on half of the roadway on which the vehicle is traveling, or is approaching so closely as to be in danger, the driver is expected to stop.

However, the law states a pedestrian shall not leave the curb or other place of safety suddenly and move into the path of a vehicle which is so close it is impossible for a driver to stop. A pedestrian crossing the roadway at any place other than within marked or unmarked crosswalks is expected to yield the right of way to the vehicle. A blind person, Champlin said, has unrestricted right of way in crossing streets but only when carrying a white cane or walking stick.

14 Pedestrians Hit Champlin also reminded residents that 14 pedestrians were struck by cars in Medford from January through October.

In this 10-month period, three of the victims were jaywalkers and two others were crossing against the traffic signal. Medford's only pedestrian fatality of 1956, which occurred early in November, also involved a jaywalker, Champlin noted.
