Salvation Army Discussed During Kiwanis Meeting

The Salvation Army in Medford has a well-rounded program of service which surpasses that of any comparable city in the United States. 1st Lt. George Johnstone informed members of the Medford Kiwanis club yesterday.

Lieutenant Johnstone, commanding officer of the Salvation Army unit here, outlined the work of the Army at the Kiwanis noon luncheon meeting at Rogue Valley Country club. He gave a "quick surface glance" at his organization and said, "We are your hands to touch human lives."

"It is the Salvation Army's spiritual passion which makes its social reconstruction program different," Johnstone stated. He pointed to the value of sympathetic understanding in extending a helping hand.

According to Need The Army, he said, "helps everybody who comes to us according to his need" and operates seven days a week. Johnstone mentioned that the Army is not seeking to hand something out free of charge with no goal in sight.

Telling of a few incidents in connection with the Medford shelter home of the Army, the commanding officer said that the facility had served 756 meals so far this month and had provided shelter for 331 persons.

Local Salvation Army officials introduced were Lt. Dick Anthony, assistant officer; Dr. J. Scott Heatherington, advisory board vice chairman, and O. P. Taylor, board treasurer.

Kiwanians set next Wednesday as "old clothing day" in a project to help the Salvation Army program.

A number of members of the Medford service club and their wives were to go to Yreka, Calif., this evening for an inter-club meeting.

Beginning of Hungarian Revolt Seen As One of Greatest Dates in History

New York — (U.P.) — British Foreign Minister Selwyn Lloyd said in an interview published by the New York World-Telegram and Sun today that Oct. 24, 1956, the beginning of the Hungarian revolt, may prove to be one of the great dates in history.

"The fact the defiance was hurled at Russia's military might by the ill-armed, teen-aged youth of Hungary was perhaps the most significant development of the last decade of Communist aggression. The myth of magic appeal of Russian Communism to the youth of the world was shattered beyond repair in the streets of Budapest."

Lloyd gave the interview to Roy W. Howard, editor of the New York World-Telegram and Sun, a few hours before the foreign minister returned to England after attending the U.N. General Assembly session here. He said there are many indications that Russian aggression in Europe reached its high watermark Oct. 24 and is now on the ebb.

"In view of the past fortnight's staggering setback to Communist prestige, no disappointments over results, and no damage to the pride of political leaders must be permitted at this hour to jeopardize even momentarily the British-American alliance which is the greatest asset of the democratic world," Lloyd told Howard.

Red Claim Shattered "The fact the defiance was hurled at Russia's military might by the ill-armed, teen-aged youth of Hungary was perhaps the most significant development of the last decade of Communist aggression. The myth of magic appeal of Russian Communism to the youth of the world was shattered beyond repair in the streets of Budapest."

The British statesman urged a return to common sense and reason.

evaluation of the mutual interests that have bound Britain and the United States together in a common policy since the start of World War II.

Acknowledging the danger inherent in the present divergencies of policy between London and Washington, Lloyd urged quick and state-like efforts on both sides and suggested an immediate political and journalistic moratorium on transatlantic recriminations.

Honest Differences "The recent flare-up in the English speaking world has developed no irreparable damage," Lloyd said. "Any worthwhile alliance... must have sufficient elasticity to allow for honest difference of opinion. The partners should on occasion be able to act unilaterally and according to the dictates of their best judgment, without jeopardizing the firm foundations of their understanding."

The foreign minister said he believes much of the present tension between London and Washington stems from an honest difference of opinion as to the possible seriousness of Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser's "illegal seizure" of the Suez Canal and its consequences. He recalled that Britain "made two serious mistakes in the '30s" in dealing with the dictators Mussolini and Hitler and did not wish to repeat them in dealing with Nasser.

Enforcing Ordinance Causes Resentment The city's announced intention to enforce an ordinance levying a $2.50 fine for parking more than the allotted time in metered spaces has caused considerable resistance and resentment, it was reported this morning.

The board of directors of the Jackson County Chamber of Commerce was told that the Retail Merchants association of the chamber has discussed the situation, and plans to take it up with city officials. They point out that enforcement of the ordinance would prevent shoppers from staying more than one hour in one of the downtown one-hour limit meter spaces, and that this works a hardship on many shoppers, particularly those from out of town.

On the other hand, it was pointed out that enforcement of the ordinance would prevent employees of downtown establishments from parking near their place of work, and "feeding" the meters all day long, thus taking that parking space away from the use of shoppers.

The situation is aggravated by the increased numbers of shoppers seeking parking space downtown due to the Christmas shopping season, and the fact that a proposal for the city to provide off-street parking space was defeated at the Nov. 6 election. Retail merchants declare that their only interest is in making parking easier, not more difficult, and that they will continue to work toward that end.

Program of Folksongs Scheduled Friday The Medford Public library will present a 15-minute radio program of folksongs over radio station KMED, at 4 p. m. Friday, Nov. 30, in observance of Book Week.

"Singing History" is a selection of story-telling songs and ballads that are part of American history and legend sung by Martha Bennett King and produced by the Children's Book Council especially for National Children's Book Week.

During her program Miss King will invite children to write their own song-stanza about the adventures they like to enjoy through reading books. She hopes to make from these a song "as long as a railroad track."

Boys and girls of Jackson county are invited to send songs to the junior department of the Medford Public library as entries in the Book Week song-writing contest. The best song will win for its author a book of his own selection from the many on display this week in the library.

Judges for the contest will include Mrs. Harriet Tobin, John Williams of KMED, and Russ Jamison.

Fire Destroys Home in Ashland Tuesday

Ashland — The two-bedroom frame home of the Jack Brown family, 435 Terrace st., Ashland, was destroyed by fire Tuesday night.

The first fire broke out about 5:25 p. m. Tuesday after the family had gone to Hornbrook, Calif. for the evening. Ashland firemen said it started when a defective chimney caused the roof and wall to catch fire.

Firemen said the blaze appeared to be extinguished by 6:55 p. m., and periodic checks were made up until 11:30 p. m. when the Browns returned. Brown worked around the building, removing furniture and other items from the burned area, until about 3 a. m. Wednesday.

He went downtown for coffee then, he said, and heard the fire department respond to another call. He returned home, and found the building completely engulfed in flames.

Firemen battled the flames until about 6 a. m., and were called to the address again about 8 a. m. yesterday, when burning embers were reported.
