Leaders in Various Fields Discuss Religious 'Boom'

New York—A group of top religious and civic leaders agreed recently that America's current "boom" in religion is a cause for national rejoicing.

But, in a National Council of Churches survey, most warned against too much optimism.

Virtually all agreed that spectacular increases in U. S. church membership are outstripping population growth, record-breaking Sunday and Sabbath school enrollments, contributions and new church building point to a widespread spiritual hunger. And people's search for deeper meanings and a firm faith is all to the good, they said.

But whether the religious "revival" is having any profound effect on individuals or improving the moral tone of the nation or changing America's influence around the world—these questions met with answers ranging from yes to no, with shadings of both in between.

Thirty-five leaders in government, religion, labor, industry, education and the arts responded to queries on the meaning of the surge of religious interest evident since World War II. Their detailed comments appear in a copyrighted article in the November issue of the National Council Outlook, organ of the National Council of Churches.

Laymen were generally more hopeful about the meaning of the revival than were leading clergymen.

Said President Eisenhower: "A growing concern for religion gives hope that our concern for the welfare, the freedom and the dignity of our fellowmen in America and around the world is also growing."

Presented with new national church statistics along with the questionnaire, the President said further: "It is heartening to see so many Americans supporting the faith which lies at the bedrock of our society."

The survey, in effect a sym-

CHURCH DOOR
Milford, Conn.—(U.P.)—Prötests were so numerous after the door of the Mary Taylor Methodist Church was painted a bright red that Rev. John A. Russell promised a referendum to settle the colorful controversy. "There's no significance to the color, political or otherwise," he said. "We just thought red would make the church stand out and be noticed."

were "the inner loneliness of modern man," fear of the H-bomb; fear of the rise of Soviet Russian power; disgust and disillusion with materialism and "gadget worship"; the effect of two World Wars; discussion of life on other planets; hunger for absolute meanings in life; the search for personal peace of mind and peace with justice in the world.

As to where it's going, many felt it is squarely up to the churches and synagogues to take the lead. Given this lead, the majority believed, a true spiritual reawakening may be in the offing that would bring about higher social morality and even reform of social evils. If strong enough the movement might, some felt, lead the world into ways of peace with justice.
