Rehabilitation Program After TB Helps Patient Develop Business

Lee Perkins, a former tuberculosis patient, owns his own archery shop on Highway 99 south of Grants Pass as a result of the rehabilitation program following treatment of TB.

Perkins' fight against TB started in 1949 when he caught mumps which later developed into pneumonia. He recovered from that, but never regained his former health.

He tried for almost a year to discharge his regular duties as a bus and truck driver, but found he was constantly tired. A physical examination disclosed he had tuberculosis.

Perkins entered the state sanitarium in October, 1950, and remained there for treatment, which included surgery as well as medication, until September, 1952. One lung was collapsed and seven ribs were removed to halt the spread of TB. The other lung, although formerly infected, has recovered to almost full working capacity.

Vacancies Exist In Aviation Unit

"They figure I'm running this business and my life on 45 per cent lung capacity," Perkins pointed out.

Because of his capacity for breathing was reduced, his physician advised him that driving a bus or truck was considered too strenuous for him.

Discusses Problem

While discussing the problem with a state tuberculosis worker, Dale Reeves, Perkins indicated his hobby was whittling and carving. Reeves then suggested the idea of arrow making and eventually working the manufacture of arrows into a retail archery business.

Starting with $100 rehabilitation funds from Christmas Seal contributions, Perkins worked his hobby into the business. Today, he, like other businessmen, is attempting to build up his business. He has started a wholesale route covering southern Oregon and northern California.

If business eventually justifies it, he plans to hire workers — handicapped people. In a few instances, when Perkins became overloaded with orders, he has hired handicapped persons to help him, and has found them good workers. He said he can sympathize with their problems.

He noted that Christmas Seal sales "made all the difference in the world" in his life.

While at the sanitarium he met his wife, Bernadine, and they, with their children, Shelly Lee, 23 months, and Walden Dean, five months, live above the archery shop.

Outside Earnings by Vets Allowable Under Korean GI

Money earned outside class by veterans attending school under the Korean GI bill has no bearing on the amount of GI allowance paid them by the government, according to S. T. Brannock, officer in charge of the local Veterans Administration office.

Outside earnings need not be reported to VA, Brannock emphasized, and explained that some veterans still confuse the Korean GI bill with the original World War II GI bill, which did have a "ceiling" applicable to earnings outside the allowance. Starting allowance for Korean GI on-the-job trainees is $70 a month with no dependents; $85 with one; and $105 with more than one dependent. As trainees progress and earnings increase, the law requires the GI allowance to be scaled down every four months, Brannock said.

The great blue heron is the largest American heron. It stands some four feet high and has a wingspread of about six feet. It puts its long bill to good use in spearing food in shallow water and defending itself.
