What X-Rays Cannot Show Up
Many a patient writes and says that he has a pain somewhere, perhaps in his pelvis or in his head or in the region of his liver, and he is impatient because his doctor says there is no sense in x-raying the region; x-rays cannot show anything there. Actually, the doctor is probably right. There are many conditions which cannot be revealed by x-rays. For instance, one cannot see a brain tumor with the ordinary x-ray technique. All one can hope to see is perhaps a pushing to one side or other of the little calcified area in the brain which represents the pineal body. One cannot see the tumor itself unless it should happen to contain calcium (lime). The tumor and the brain have about the same consistency, and hence the same resistance to the x-rays. In order to learn more about the brain with the help of x-rays one can inject air into the ventricles or spaces normally present in the brain. A growing tumor is likely to deform one of these ventricles or to push it out of place.

Similarly, one cannot see a tumor in the liver because the tumor and the liver have the same density. Also, without special techniques one cannot see an ovary, or inflammation in the appendix. One can see the gall bladder only when it fills with a special chemical which is given to the patient. Also, one can see the inside of the kidney only after one has injected into the patient a substance which is taken out of the blood and excreted into the urine. It can then be seen with the x-rays. One can see the stomach by filling it with a suspension of a substance like barium which is largely impervious to the x-rays.

A Woman Talks Back
A woman who writes a powerful pen writes me, protesting against my column which was reprinted in the Reader's Digest for November. How right she is! I am sure that if they could read my correspondent's letter a million women would rise up to thank her for having expressed my views so well and so vividly. She says, "After reading your article in the Reader's Digest, I cannot refrain from a cynical grin when I note that in many cases, the wife has allowed herself to get stout and unattractive" which has contributed to making the man impatient. As a widow of 20 years' standing, with a wide circle of friends, and a sense of humor. I am somewhat irked by this biased reasoning, as though women were the only sex that relaxed after marriage.

And, when I recall the overhanging paunches, the bald heads, the heavy jaws with which my eyes are obliged to cope, here and there, I wonder if men are so entirely lacking in a sense of humor that they fail to recognize their deficiencies along these lines; or do they never look in a mirror? Yet now they have the nerve to state that "in many cases the wife has allowed herself to get stout and unattractive." As I remarked before, I have a sense of humor and, while I like men all right (in their proper place), I cannot help being irked by the prevailing conviction on their part that only women grow old, stout and unattractive.

Obviously, many of us men had better start on a reduction diet before we start casting aspersions on the ladies!
