

New Federal Order On Stock Movement In Effect Jan. 1

Salem—A new federal order governing the interstate movement of animals and making certain requirements with respect to testing or vaccinating cattle for brucellosis will go into effect Jan. 1, 1957.

All cattle moved interstate except steers, spayed heifers and calves under eight months old, come under the federal order on that date.

Dr. A. G. Beagle, head of federal veterinarians in Oregon, said the order is intended to strengthen and support the national brucellosis eradication program.

The order is a natural development to tighten up loose ends of a program of this kind and is not put on the books to trap animal owners, Dr. Beagle explained. The federal veterinarians will expect compliance with the new order, and to that end are attempting to get details to all owners in Oregon.

To avoid unnecessary curtailment of the normal movement of cattle to stockyards and slaughter establishments, some exceptions are made for interstate movement.

After Jan. 1, cattle without a record of test or vaccination may be moved to stockyards and slaughter plants only if these plants have been approved by cooperating federal and state authorities. The establishments must meet certain requirements of the order.

Unvaccinated or unvaccinated animals crossing state lines may enter the approved yards or plants only if accompanied by an official transportation slip or certificate signed by the owner or shipper. Cattle received at slaughter plants must be for immediate slaughter.

Animals may be released from stockyards only if they meet the interstate brucellosis requirements. In another exception, the chief of the animal disease branch of the USDA at Washington has authority to authorize interstate movement of animals for feeding or grazing purposes only under certain circumstances.

Beagle pointed out that five states—Maine, New Hampshire, North Carolina, Washington and Wisconsin—have qualified as modified-certified free areas. Wisconsin and Washington qualified last June.

Twenty-seven Oregon counties are now on a testing program; another county has completed its testing to start testing and three others are circulating petitions. The Oregon goal for certification of all counties is June 30, 1958. The national goal for 1959 nationwide, 585 counties. 18 per cent of the total are certified, and 334 counties are doing testing.

Letters Being Sent To Liquor Dealers

Portland—A special letter is being sent by the Oregon liquor control commission to about 4,700 persons who will receive license certificates authorizing them to sell alcoholic beverages at retail during 1957.

Cautionary precautions, which result most often in suspension or cancellation of license privilege, one letter is directed to licensees who sell alcoholic beverages by the package for off-premises consumption, and another to licensees who sell for consumption on the premises. Letters are enclosed with new license certificates.

Emphasis is placed on sanitation of order, avoiding sales to gamblers and intoxicated persons, financial assistance pitfalls, standing on duty and proper application procedure when changing ownership or remodeling.
