Oregon Income Tax Payments Compared With Other States

Salem—UP—State and local taxes for a family of four are lower in Oregon than in Washington incomes below $5,000 but higher above $5,000.

Taxes for this family of four are about the same in Oregon and California up to $9,000, but Oregon taxes are higher above this point.

These comparisons were contained in a report on the tax structures of Washington, Oregon and California published by the Legislative Interim Tax Study committee.

The publication pointed out that Oregon is collecting the largest per cent of personal incomes for state and local taxes, but that the difference among the three states is small—less than one per cent.

All three states are above the national average, however. Washington is almost entirely dependent on sales and gross receipts taxes while Oregon is heavily dependent on net income taxes.

In practically all cases, the report said, comparable personal income taxpayers pay substantially higher incomes in Oregon than in California, Oregon and California taxpayers in high income brackets also pay more in income taxes than Washingtonians pay in sales taxes.

Corporations pay about the same rates on net incomes in Oregon and California, but the Washington business and occupation tax calls for larger payments from low-profit firms than Oregon and California and lower payments from high-profit corporations.

Taxes on real property are comparable in Oregon and California, but Washington property taxes are approximately half as much, the report revealed.
