Depression 30s Exert Influence On New Fashions

By GAY PAULEY
United Press Correspondent

New York—UP—Fashions of the depression 30s now shape the shape of the prosperous '30s. Designers have turned for inspiration to the years of the broad lines for spring, 1937, clothes lines. One industry source explained there is a logical reason why the 30s trend dominates in clothes which this week will be shown 300 reporters from the United States and Canada.

Sponsor of the semi-annual shows, by 40 leading designers and manufacturers, is the Couture group of the New York Dress Institute.

Eleanor Lambert, spokesman for the group, said the era when "prosperity is just around the corner" has much in common with the "peace in our time" sentiment today. Both were jitters periods and clothes reflect a national state of mind. Let us get a case of nerves, and fashion becomes simpler. Clothes become extravagant when there is no unrest.

This spring, every way a woman turns she will see the influence of such great designers of the 30s as Chanel, Mainbocher, and Molyneux. New suits, for instance, are as casual and easy-fitted as if Chanel herself had turned them out.

The leather-belted suit is back, with belt sometimes circling the skirt rather than the jacket. The silhouette in general has a sharper outline, through the unobtrusive squaring of shoulders, necklines and yokes.

Coats usually button, rather than wrap and the waistline returns to normal, replacing 1936's high-rising empire.

Skirts for daytime are an inch or so longer than last spring, and the Couture group said the "demi-length," or near the ankles, is the top trend for evening.

Roosevelt PTA To Hear Speaker

Wednesday Club Hears Review of Captain's Story

Mrs. R. T. Nichol reviewed the story "Captain of the Queens," from a Reader's Digest book, a condensation of "The Autobiography of Captain Harry Grattidge," as told to Richard Collier, at the last meeting of the Wednesday Study club.

The author relates the experiences of a lad choosing the sea as a profession. Signing with the four-masted bark Osborne when 14 years of age, he endured the loneliness, tyranny of superiors, long voyages, violent storms, even mutiny, the tragedy and danger of both World Wars, culminating in the proud position in the British Merchant Marine, Captain of the Queen Mary.

Captain Grattidge was later promoted to commodore of the Cunard line and captain of the great ship Queen Elizabeth. He retired after fifty years of service, knowing the incomparable satisfaction that the sea returns to those who serve it zestfully.

Mrs. M. M. Morris gave a short talk with dolls as the subject. She spoke of the primitive peoples of Africa, Cuba, India and other foreign countries, who use dolls as tokens of safety and good luck, or for evil purposes. Dolls are also used for ceremonial and religious reasons even in this country. Mrs. Morris also mentioned the famous collection of Queen Victoria, many of the dolls being in museums.
