Eisenhower Warns Against Inflation

tem is adequate. He said this "vital inquiry" would give Congress information for legislation to improve "our financial machinery."

This would be the first big investigation of credit and financial practices since the famous "pecora investigation" conducted by the Senate Banking committee in the early 1930s. That inquiry led to many reforms in banking and stock market practices.

Mr. Eisenhower told Congress that the school construction bill would "benefit children of all races throughout the country — and children of all races need schools now."

Civil Rights Protections

In urging against tacking integration provisions to the measure, he added:

"I urge the people in all sections of the country to approach these problems (of integration) with calm and reason, with mutual understanding and good will, and in the American tradition of deep respect for the orderly processes of law and justice."

The President Asked Congress to create a bipartisan commission to investigate civil rights violations; set up a civil rights section in the Justice Department; pass new measures to enforce voting rights and permit the federal government to use civil courts to prevent violation of civil rights.

Mr. Eisenhower said he will keep pressing for his proposed "open skies" agreement among nations providing for inspection of armaments by "unarmed aerial sentinels."

Giving Details Later

He delayed detailed legislative requests until his Jan. 16 budget message, but he did call for:

Prompt action to "regularize" the status of Hungarian refugees, more money for the U.S. Information Agency in its fight against Communist propaganda, and congressional authorization for full U.S. participation in the International Atomic Energy Agency.

Mr. Eisenhower said that, through future messages from him or department heads, the administration will submit special recommendations for legislation involving a broad range of subjects.

These will include federal financing affairs, defense, the administration of justice, agriculture "urgently needed" increases in postal rates, domestic and foreign commerce, natural resources, labor, health, atomic energy, public works and labor-management relations.

Mr. Eisenhower's message was a new style, streamlined document, much shorter and more generalized than previous State of the Union messages.

It was largely an appraisal of the domestic and world situations, with less emphasis on legislative recommendations.

In the domestic field, Mr. Eisenhower expressed that his detailed farm program for 1957 would be outlined in the budget message. But in the meantime, he said, he found that "the long slide in farm income has been halted and that further improvement is in prospect." He called this "heartening progress" and promised that the administration would seek constantly new ways by which farm families could share more fully in the unprecedented prosperity of the nation.

Armory Planned At Housing Project

area, and as the sub-standard, "temporary" war-built buildings became more and more obsolete and dangerous as fire-hazards. Of the original 157 units, 57 have already been vacated and torn down. The remaining 100 are no longer suitable or safe for residential purposes, Goldy explained.

He said the armory may be constructed this summer, and that it is hoped to complete the swimming pool this year.

State, Federal Laws

The Jackson County Housing authority is an independent governmental entity, created under both state and federal laws, with members of the board appointed by the county court. It was first organized in 1941 to provide low-cost, temporary wartime housing for defense workers, most of them engaged in the construction of the Army's Camp White. The project was occupied in 1943.

The authority operated it under contract to the federal government until May, 1952, when the authority purchased the project from the federal government. During the war there were 125 units, and after the war, 32 additional buildings were brought here from Vanport, near Portland, to bring the total up to 157 during the post-war pinch on housing.

Housing Available

As more housing became available, the number was gradually decreased to 100 units, two of which are now leased rent-free to the Junior Service League for its hard-of-hearing children's clinic.

Goldy reported that during the period the project was under government control, about 70 per cent of the original cost was returned to the government through rents. Payments in lieu of taxes have been made to the city, county and school district in amounts equivalent to those paid by private property, he said.

In addition to Goldy, members of the housing authority board are H. S. Deuel, Bert Thierolf, Otto Ewaldsen, Elwood Hedberg and Robert Duff, chairman.

Oregon Farmers Have Highest Output

Corvallis — (UPI) — Oregon farmers produced their highest crop output in history during 1956—a total of 5,300,000 tons.

Mrs. Elvera Horrell, agricultural economist at Oregon State college, said field crops and vegetables headed the record production. Oats planted in the spring produced the highest yields per acre ever recorded in Oregon.

Other crops reaching new highs included potatoes, hay, sugar beets and peppermint, as well as seeds from alfalfa, white clover, crimson clover, bentgrass and Merion bluegrass.
