Rio Hikes Age Level To See Yank Movie

Rio De Janeiro — (U.P.) — The Federal Censor Department raised the minimum age for seeing the American film "Rock Around The Clock" from 14 to 18 today after teenagers demonstrated at the picture's first showing in five Rio's theaters.

Police arrested 30 students Monday night while breaking up the disturbances. The wildest outbreak occurred at the Copacabana Theater where teenagers fired rockets and blocked traffic outside. Screaming students danced and demonstrated in the lobbies and aisles of all the theaters until they were calmed down by squads of police.

Police had stationed special anti-riot squads at the theaters in hopes of preventing the disturbances before they started. A few weeks ago, teenagers in Sao Paulo engaged in frantic rock 'n roll dancing in the aisles when the film was shown. Other students tore up the seats and two girls were halfway through a strip tease before police stopped them.

College Teacher Near Record TV Jackpot

New York — (U.P.) — A 30-year-old Columbia University English instructor won $99,000 Monday night and placed himself in line to become the biggest money winner in television quiz show history.

Charles Van Doren, son of poet and critic Mark Van Doren, soared within $1,000 of the record on the NBC program "Twenty-one." He will return next week to decide whether to try to become the first person to surpass $100,000 on a TV jackpot show.

Van Doren, who could win an unlimited amount of money on the show, started Monday night with $46,500 he had amassed during eight weeks of competition. His earnings soared as he defeated textbook writer Ruth Miller of New York in "current events," 21 to 0. Playing for $2,500 a point, he added $42,500 to his winnings.

Van Doren is the nephew of Pulitzer prize-winning historian Carl Van Doren.

Skelton Will Force Comedy on TV Show

Hollywood — (U.P.) — Comedian Red Skelton, grieving over the tragic plight of his nine-year-old son, will strive to be his old laughable self tonight when he returns to television in the show must go on tradition.

His boy, Richard, is a victim of dread leukemia and has perhaps only five months to live. Red has been so broken up over the tragedy that he cancelled last Tuesday's show.

Red will go on tonight's show bolstered by the sympathy of people from all over the world. Letters have poured in from fans in England, Japan, South America and other foreign countries who want to help the comedian try to save his only son.

Around Hollywood

Hollywood — (U.P.) — A recent list of America's worst dressed women may have crushed Judy Garland and Marilyn Monroe but one victim is proud of it.

"I'm just not clothes conscious," beamed Marjorie Main today. First in the news was an annual 10 best-dressed list, featuring countesses and society leaders. Then another group last week named the worst dressed females, with Misses Garland, Monroe and Main in the ranks.

I sped to Universal-International studio to see how the lovable Miss Main was taking this blow. She chuckled, "They should have put me first on the list."

"Clothes don't interest me, never have," said Marjorie, who's back in town to star in her eighth Ma and Pa Kettle movie. "When I went to boarding school I wore one dress over and over. Mother tried to get me into other clothes. She said I should dress to please others."

Clothes Unimportant "Why? Clothes aren't important. If you can't please people without dressing up then what are you? Your real friends love you for what you are, not for what you wear."

The veteran actress strode to her dressing room closet to show what the "worst dressed woman" wears. She brought out some two-piece cotton dresses she wears around her home in Palm Springs, "where I live because of sinus trouble."

"Now this is a dress I've worn for years. Cost five or six dollars," she said, displaying a blue-and-green plaid number that buttoned down the front. "This navy blue coat I've had for years, too."

She hastily pulled out a scarf that was bulging in the coat pocket. "I always have something tied to my head, like a scarf," she said.

Hats Worn to Meetings Recently Miss Main had two fabulous chapeaux made by Rex, a milliner to the movie stars, "but I never wear them. The only time I wear a hat is to the Friday Morning Club lectures."

"Don't wear suits," she went on. "Don't wear cocktail clothes

EGYPTIAN HOLIDAY

Cairo — (U.P.) — President Gamal Abdel Nasser today decreed Jan. 16 as constitution day and ordered a national holiday throughout Egypt Wednesday. The present Egyptian constitution was announced on Jan. 16 last year.

The actress closed her closet door with a smile.

"I wear simple clothes because I want people to feel at home around me," she said.
