The Medical Roundup

A Bunch of Nerves

A young man writes that he has been utterly miserable, and much worried about his health. He has been going from one clinic to another getting examined, from head to foot at great cost to his family, but nothing has ever been found, and he is getting desperate. As he says, he gets a sort of dizziness at times, with a feeling of a lump in his throat that won't go up or down. He has feeling of great air hunger, as if he could not get enough air down deep into his lungs. He runs to a window, hoping that there he will find more air.

His doctors have told him there is not a single sign of heart disease, but he is still worried because his heart sometimes races or skips a beat and then thumps in his neck. When he is frightened, he sometimes belches for half an hour, or he gets diarrhea. Often he gets "butterflies" in his abdomen and a burning over his stomach. If he goes out with his girl, he is likely to become nervous and so nauseated that he cannot eat anything. His bowel may then fill with gas and give him much distress. He may bloat like a "poisoned pup."

At times he feels a pressure in his brain and he has pains that move around in his chest. His hands are usually so cold and wet he is ashamed to shake hands with anyone. Sometimes he gets jittery spells when he feels chilly. Sometimes he vomits his breakfast. At times he feels too short of breath to walk fast, and at other times he can play baseball comfortably. He wants to know what is wrong and what he can do to get well. He strongly suspects his bad nerves have come from his mother who, for years, was in a state hospital.

Actually, all his symptoms are typical of a person who was born with a poor set of nerves. Not a single symptom suggests disease in his chest or abdomen. I can see no sense in examining this poor fellow any further—that can only waste his money. He will probably always have to put up with some nervousness, and so he might as well start learning to live with his nerves. The big thing is not to get frightened when they start playing tricks with his heart or his stomach or the blood vessels and sweat-glands and muscles in his skin.

Two Weeks Remain For Address Filing

Portland—The United States immigration and naturalization service has reminded aliens in Oregon that only two weeks remain in which non-citizens must file annual address reports as required by law.

Ernest J. Hover, district director, pointed out that address report forms are available at the nearest immigration service office or post office for the convenience of non-citizens required to report their address to the government each January under a provision of the Immigration and Nationality act of 1952.

Hover said the only non-citizens not required to report their addresses are persons in diplomatic status, foreign representatives assigned to the United Nations, and Mexican national contract laborers.

He said persons found guilty of a willful violation would be subject to a possible fine, jail sentence, and deportation.

The immigration official said approximately 4,800 aliens filed reports during the first two weeks of January, slightly below the number reported for the same period in 1956.

Paper, Pulp Industry Training Set at OSC

Corvallis—A program aimed at making Oregon State college a national leader in training graduates for the pulp and paper industry has been started and plans are underway for expansion of research work in the field.

The enlargement of teaching and research programs in pulp and paper chemistry has been prompted by the demand for trained workers, especially in the northwest where the industry is making its greatest growth.

Dr. Ervin F. Kurth, professor of forest products chemistry at the college, is in charge of the new program, which operates within the chemistry department and the Science Research Institute.

At present, OSC is one of four schools offering graduate work in the field of pulp and paper.
