Two Proud Wives And Five Children Share Inauguration

By PATRICIA WIGGINS
United Press Correspondent
Washington — (U.P.) — Two proud wives and five wide-eyed youngsters shared today's inaugural spotlight with President Eisenhower and Vice President Richard M. Nixon.

A happy Mamie Eisenhower, facing a day which won't end until the wee hours after four inaugural bells, had three of her grandchildren close by to watch her husband take the presidential oath for the second time.

With them were Mrs. Richard M. Nixon and her two daughters, Patricia, 10, and eight-year-old Julie who was still shy over the remains of a black eye caused by a sledding mishap.

The Eisenhower youngsters, David, 8, Barbara Anne, 7, and Susan, 4, drove up to the Capitol with their parents, Maj. and Mrs. John Eisenhower for the impressive ceremony starring grandpa "Ike."

The first lady chose a new two-piece fitted violet suit of fine gabardine for the swearing-in ceremony and inaugural parade afterward. Designed by her favorite designer, Mollie Parnis, its hip-bone length jacket was single breasted with small notched revers and bracelet-length sleeves. The skirt was of medium width, double-pleated in narrow box pleats.

Atop her famous bangs perched a new Sally Victor creation: a small violet taffeta cloche with all-over stitching, self-material bow and turned up brim.

Mrs. Nixon's new inaugural outfit was a rose-red suit with slim skirt and abbreviated jacket topped by an ostrich plume pillbox hat of matching shade.

Missing from the family gathering was the youngest Eisenhower grandchild, 13-month-old Mary Jean Eisenhower. She was left behind at the White House today, but stole a march on the nation's other big wigs by witnessing her grandfather's private swearing-in at the White House Sunday. For that, she was held in the arms of Deloris Mooney, wife of presidential valet John Mooney.

Retired Teachers Hear Dr. Selim

Jackson County Retired Teachers heard an Egyptian educator, Dr. Hussein Kamel Selim of Cairo, speak at the last meeting. Dr. Selim replaced Mrs. H. P. Bosworth Jr., who brought the visitor to the meeting.

Dr. Selim explained that he, too, is a retired teacher except that he believed his lectures in America are in a sense lessons. He paid tribute to all teachers. The speaker said that many new schools are being constructed in Egypt, that new ones have averaged one day for the past four years, and that soon the illiteracy of Egyptians will be a thing of the past. He made a plea for friendship between the United States and his country. Mrs. George Carter, hostess for the meeting, is also the new president of the group. She outlined plans for the coming year, and named committees.

Mrs. D. J. D'Albini and Mrs. Marie Disney assisted the hostesses during the tea hour.
