Steps Could Ban
Coloring Used
In Oleomargarine

Washington—(U.P.)—The Food and Drug Administration is taking steps that could ban use of four coal tar colors in coloring butter, oleomargarine and other foods.

The FDA said there have been no reports of any injurious effects on human beings from the four coal tar colors involved, yellow, No. 1, 2, 3, and 4.

But it said studies on animals indicate "that excessive amounts of these color could cause injury."

FDA Commissioner George P. Larrick said that in view of these findings the agency is required by law to "initiate proceedings to remove" the colors from the list certified for use in foods.

The law requires that an approved coal tar color must be "harmless" regardless of the amounts used. The FDA certifies coal tar colors which may be legally used in foods.

The agency gave notice of its action in a proposed resolution published in the Federal Register Wednesday. Under the regulation, the colors would be dropped from the food list but still be permitted in drugs and cosmetics for external use.

The FDA said it has certified only small amounts of yellow No. 1, most of which is reported to be sold for export. It said no lots of yellow No. 2 have been certified and that apparently it is not being used.

Yellow No. 3 and No. 4, the FDA said, are used extensively in coloring butter, oleomargarine and other foods.

Authorities identified the new suspect only as Benny and flatly refused to give any further details.

But witnesses said Benny, in his early twenties, was seen Jan. 6 in a skidrow restaurant with two young girls.

Two persons said the girls resembled Barbara Grimes, 15, and her sister, Patricia, 13, whose nude and frozen bodies were found Tuesday in a ditch on the city's outskirts.

The dishwasher was arrested Wednesday night in the Star and Garter theater on skidrow. Came Into Restaurant

A sheriff's officer acknowledged making the arrest but refused to say more. Chicago police complained that they were not informed of the arrest and said it violated a pledge of cooperation among the various law enforcement agencies.

Mrs. Minnie Duros, 68, who with her husband owns the D and L restaurant, said the Grimes sisters came into the restaurant with Benny about 5 a.m. Jan. 6, nine days after they had disappeared from home.

Mrs. Duros was shown photographs of the sisters and said, "I'm sure they were the Grimes girls."

In addition to Benny, a dark-complexioned man, a Mexican or Puerto Rican, was with them, she said.

A cab driver who saw the girls in the restaurant also identified them as the Grimes sisters. He said they looked "sick, drugged or drunk."

Left With Men
Mrs. Duros said the girls and the two men ate breakfast. She said the older girl appeared to be "in bad shape."

She said they got into a car with the two men and drove off, but returned about 9 a.m. with Benny, ate again and left.

Mrs. Duros said Benny worked as a truck driver or laborer, and often worked nights for her as a dishwasher. But she said she had not seen him since he came in with the two girls.

Counter Proposal
Made in Plan for Guard Training

Washington—(U.P.)—Forty-seven state adjutants general have made a counter proposal to the administration's plan that would require all National Guard recruits to take six months active duty training.

The adjutants general proposed Wednesday that guard recruits between 17 and 18½ be given 11 weeks training and those between 18½ and 25 six months.

The National Guard fears that the longer training for all recruits would discourage volunteers.

The adjutants general offered their proposal at a meeting called by the National Guard Association to develop strategy aimed at seeking congressional help in scuttling the program.

At the same time, the administration moved to rally congressional support for its own tougher program.

President Eisenhower and Army Secretary Wilber M. Brucker outlined the administration plan at a White House meeting of GOP legislative leaders. Lester, Republican Leader William F. Knowland laid it before the Senate Republican Policy Committee.

The National Guard said it favors "a period of basic training" for all reservists but believes it "should be of such duration as to be acceptable to young men."

It said it doubts the six-month program would be "acceptable" to an "adequate" number of would-be volunteers.

Prince Congratulated
By Happy Subjects; Celebration Goes On

Monaco—(U.P.)—A proud and beaming Prince Rainier, showing no signs of the traditional nervousness of a new father, appeared on the palace balcony today to accept the congratulations of his happy subjects.

It was his first public appearance since Princess Grace gave birth to an eight pound, three-ounce daughter early Wednesday. Princess Caroline Louise Marguerite was born during a rainstorm, but Monaco was flooded with bright Mediterranean sunshine today.

Crowd of 5,000
The Prince waved and smiled at a crowd estimated at 5,000, about twice the population of this tiny principality on the Riviera. Four Monegasque choral groups, totaling more than 250 voices, led the crowd in an impromptu concert of traditional native tunes.

The Prince came out on the balcony when the crowd roared in unison "Vive le Prince. Vive la Princesse Grace. Vive la Princesse Caroline."

An official bulletin released by the attending physicians said the Princess slept without waking for a six-hour stretch from midnight to 6 o'clock this morning.

Palace sources said Grace got out of bed today. They said she spent about an hour walking about with the help of a nurse and sitting up to chat with Rainier and her mother, Mrs. John B. Kelly Sr., Philadelphia.

Doctors announced this morning that the baby was 20 inches long at birth.

Tourists Aid Celebration
Holidaying American sailors and tourists flocked into Monaco to help the local citizens to celebrate and to wish the Prince, his princess and their daughter well.

Monagasques filed into the entryway of the palace court to sign their names and signify their good wishes in Princess Caroline's birth register.

Scores of citizens nursed hangovers but refused to allow the throbbing heads to interfere with another day of wild celebrating.

Happy Monegasques, tax-free and draft-free for another generation, danced in the streets outside the palace walls Wednesday night, and there was no end of the supply of free-flowing champagne.
