Confessed Slayer, Alleged Accomplice, To Meet at Inquest Into Girls' Deaths

Chicago—(U.P.)—A face-to-face meeting between the man believed by police to be the slayer of two teenage sisters and his alleged accomplice was set today at the opening of an inquest into the girls' deaths.

Cook County Coroner Walter McCarron said he has asked that Bennie (The Dishwasher) Bedwell, 21, and the other man, William Cole Willingham Jr., 26, appear at the inquest.

Willingham has denied any connection with the sex and liquor murder of Patricia Grimes, 13, and her sister, Barbara, 15, whose nude and frozen bodies were found in a roadside ditch a week ago today.

Willingham's statements and subsequent investigations have led some officials, including McCarron, to cast doubt on Bedwell's confession.

"If the confession is not true," McCarron said, "that fact should be disclosed as quickly as possible for the benefit of two girls who are dead and unable to defend themselves."

Willingham, a self-styled hillbilly singer from Richmond, Va., admitted to police he and Bedwell "picked up" two girls on a skid road, but denied they were the Grimes sisters.

Police said Willingham, nicknamed "Frank Sinatra" because of his singing, resembled the man named "Frank" whom Bedwell cited as his partner in the crime.

Willingham said the girls he and Bedwell took on a tour of skid road saloons shortly after Christmas were Indian girls from Michigan.

At Detroit, police said one of the girls, Carol King, 19, confirmed she and her girl friend, Irene Dean, dated Willingham and Bedwell at the time.

Senate Committee To Investigate Food Marketing Costs, Profits

Washington—(U.P.)—The Senate Agriculture Committee is investigating food marketing costs and profits to find out "who gets how much" of the consumer's food dollar.

Agriculture Department figures show that 60 cents of the consumer's dollar went for marketing costs last year, compared with 53 cents in 1950. The farmer's share dropped from 47 to 40 cents over the same period, according to department records.

Sen. Allen J. Ellender (D-La.), chairman of the Senate committee, said he ordered the study to "get the facts and to see whether we can increase the farmer's share." If the trend of rising marketing costs continues, he said, "something may have to be done."

Ellender said Congress is not likely to approve any federal control over food marketing costs. "That would mean price fixing, and I don't like that," the senator said.

The farm bloc leader said a committee staff study of marketing costs and margins will be ready for review by committee members in three or four weeks. The 15-member committee will then decide whether to hold public hearings.

Ellender praised food handlers and processors for their cooperation in the staff study. Agriculture Department studies in recent years show substantial increases in marketing costs for many foods, including milk, beef, bread, pork, and poultry. Marketing costs for eggs have dropped slightly.

Marketing Costs Rose

Farm prices were dropping from 1951 through 1955 but rising marketing costs prevented any substantial reduction in consumer prices. When farm prices stabilized last year, consumer prices started climbing.

Department officials traced the increased marketing costs since 1950 to a "substantial" boost in food, industry wages, supplies, and transportation expenses.

At the same time, they said, profits of some food firms, including meat packers, and retail grocery chains have been climbing in recent years. Profits of a sample group of food marketing firms, they said, have been moving up slowly after a sharp drop in 1951.

But profits of six major baking companies have been edging down.

Ellender said labor and management in the food industry "have a golden opportunity to help work out a way to check the increase in labor costs and the costs of commodities."

Further wage increases must be coupled with stepped-up productivity, he said, "or we'll be in trouble."

U.S. Information Officer Asked To Submit Resignation

Seoul, Korea—(U.P.)—A U.S. information officer who publicly denounced President Eisenhower's Middle East doctrine handed in his resignation today.

Charles Edmundson said in a statement earlier that loss of his job was "not too high a price for an American to pay for the luxury of saying what he believes."

The U.S. Information Agency in Washington demanded Edmundson's resignation on the ground that he violated a regulation forbidding employees from issuing unauthorized statements.

Criticizes Foreign Policy Edmundson Sunday denounced the Eisenhower doctrine as a "blank check for one-man rule" in a statement in Tokyo. He made additional criticisms of the doctrine and other aspects of U.S. foreign policy in a statement issued today.

President Eisenhower, Edmundson said, "wants to turn his back on the United Nations and take upon America's shoulders alone the task of preserving peace in the Middle East."

"I am against such a course, I have said so and that is why I am asked to resign," Edmundson said.

Edmundson's statement was made in Tokyo before his return to Seoul this afternoon to resign. As a member of the USIA in Korea, Edmundson handed his resignation to John P. McKnight, director of USIA here.

Stassen's Argument For GOP Rejected

Washington—(U.P.)—The White House has rejected Harold E. Stassen's argument that having Vice President Richard M. Nixon on the GOP ticket last year cost Republicans control of Congress.

Stassen, presidential disarmament adviser and one-time "boy wonder" of GOP politics, said Sunday on a TV panel show that he believed the Republicans would have won Congress if Gov. Christian A. Herter of Massachusetts had replaced Nixon on the ticket.

Herter, who will succeed Herbert Hoover Jr. as undersecretary of state Friday, was boomed unsuccessfully by Stassen to replace Nixon on the GOP ticket.

Acting White House Press Secretary Murray Snyder said Monday he had not discussed Stassen's remarks with President Eisenhower. But he said Stassen "was expressing his own views and I have found no one in the White House who holds the same views."

Employee of Soviet Embassy Departs; Expulsion Hinted

New York—(U.P.)—An employee of the Soviet Embassy in Washington left here Monday night for Paris without commenting on speculation he had been expelled in connection with a newly-disclosed Soviet spy ring said to be operating in the United States.

Both the State department and the Soviet Embassy refused to discuss the sudden departure of Vassil Molev, indicating that the Russian had been ousted from the country.

Molev, after first denying his identity when confronted by reporters at International airport, said, "I can't say anything."

Held Minor Post Molev and his wife, Taisiya, who accompanied him Monday night, had been in Washington since September, 1955. A spokesman at the Soviet Embassy said Molev held a minor post, similar to that of a clerk.

Air France officials said he and his wife had reservations only to Paris.

If Molev was expelled, he was the second Russian to be ousted in three days. Maj. Yuri P. Krylov, an assistant Soviet military attaché, left last Saturday for home after being declared persona non grata (an undesirable person). U.S. government officials said Krylov improperly bought electronic equipment and tried to purchase American military secrets while in this country.

May Disclose Molev's Part Indications were the State and Justice Departments would disclose within the next two days whether Molev was expelled or left the country voluntarily. There was speculation Molev was one of the Soviet officials whom the FBI had indicated were involved in the espionage ring uncovered last Friday with the arrest of three persons here. In announcing the arrests, the FBI hinted that the spy suspects Jack Soble, 53, his wife, Myra, 52, and Jacob Albam, 65, had worked in consort with Soviet Embassy officials in allegedly spying for the Soviet Union. Final selection of the special 23-member grand jury which will be asked to return indictments against the Sobles and Albam was expected to be completed late today.

Master's Degree in Secondary Education Considered at SOC

Ashland—Possible establishment of a five year master's degree program at Southern Oregon college for teachers in secondary education is being considered by a statewide committee, according to Dr. E. W. Bowman and Dr. A. W. Graham.

Members of the committee had their first opportunity to collectively discuss the need and possibilities, of such a program at a meeting in Eugene Jan. 11. Dr. Graham stated that each institution was instructed to survey the need for granting a master's degree in secondary education.

He said that as a part of the effort to analyze the need Southern Oregon college is sending letters to all junior and senior high schools in Jackson, Josephine and Klamath counties.

Explain Courses The letters explain courses at Southern Oregon college leading to a master's degree in secondary education. The teachers also will be asked to indicate whether they would be interested in attending SOC if such a degree were available.

Dr. Graham and Dr. Bowman both stressed that the exact nature of the proposed master's degree has not yet been determined, because ideas for the program are still in the planning stage.

Graham stated, however, that there is some consideration being given by SOC to granting a master's degree in general studies.

In obtaining such a degree the student would be required to take 15 hours of professional courses, 15 hours in his major, 9 hours in secondary education, and 6 hours of electives.

He added that each of the departments is currently considering which "400" courses should be offered as graduate, and what "500" courses would be necessary to offer a master's degree in general education.

Offers 90 Hours Graham further stated that Southern Oregon college currently offers 90 hours of work in professional education, and that the college already has a master's degree program in the elementary field. In addition, Graham and Bowman mentioned that there are several high school teachers already enrolled at SOC who are taking courses leading toward a master's degree.

Also stressed was the fact that SOC is now preparing several secondary education students who attend the school five years before they are qualified as high school teachers. Graham commented that it would therefore be logical and consistent for these students to be able to obtain their master's degree in secondary education at Southern Oregon college.

Youths Reminded of Service Registration G. T. Applewhite, chairman of the local selective service board, today reminded young men the law requires them to register for the selective service within five days after their 18th birthdays.

"The currently reduced monthly calls for induction in Oregon has resulted in an increased likelihood of prompt registrations," he said. "This is not a willful disregard of the law in most instances but is considered to be an oversight. Even though inductions may continue to be light and to a large extent may be filled by those volunteering for induction, the Universal Military Training and Service Act still requires every young man to register promptly."
