The Medical Roundup

by Walter Alvarez
Emeritus Consultant in Medicine, Mayo Clinic
Emeritus Professor of Medicine, Mayo Foundation

Chronic Worries

A woman says that as long as she can remember, her mother has always been a terrible worrier. She has always felt very ill and about to die. Today, this mother is 77, and she feels that one of her ailments is going to take her off any day. Dr. Alvarez now, her daughter fears she is following in the same habit. Recently when she found some glands in her armpit and groin and neck, she went to see a physician about them. When he said they were of no consequence, she went to two more doctors. They, also, told her to forget them, but still she worries. She says, "I'm frantic with anxiety, and now I realize that I'm behaving just as my mother has always done. Nature is pulling me that way." How well the lady expresses it! So many of us inherit a tendency to anxiety that hounds us all our days. Some of us even get disgusted when the doctors at a great clinic examine us from head to foot and find nothing wrong! Many a time I've had to say to a disappointed and angry woman, "It isn't my fault that you haven't a cancer; I realize it would be nicer for you to have a cancer; we could cut that out, but we cannot cut out this terrible fear of disease that you have day after day and year after year. That is something you will have to fight yourself; there is no drug I can give you to cure it."

The Child Who "Rocks"

There are a few children who, when put in their crib, will get on hands and knees and then rock back and forth, pounding their heels with their buttocks. Apparently, half asleep, the child will keep this up for an hour or more, night after night. One of the ablest pediatricians I know says he has no idea why children do this. All he knows is that after a while they get over it. Dr. Alvarez hopes his readers will understand that it would be impossible for him to answer requests for information or to attempt to diagnose by mail. (Released by The Register and Tribune Syndicate, 1957)

Most Babies Born During Morning

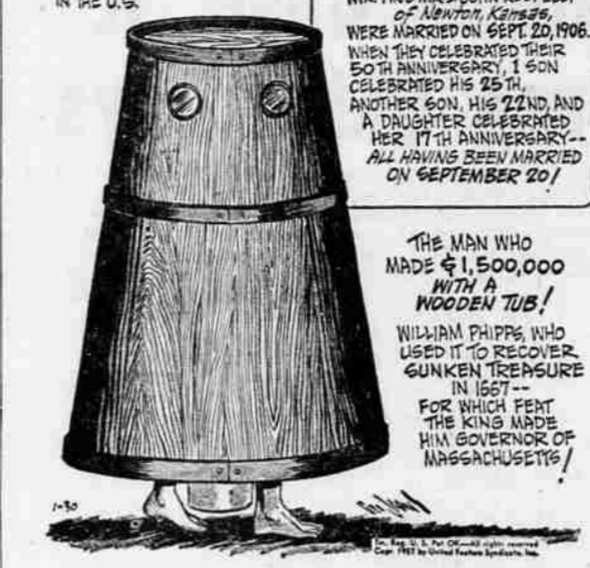

Probably most people have the idea that babies are usually born at night. Recently, Dr. Peter D. King, of Warren, Penn., studied the hours of birth of 33,215 babies born in several hospitals. When he compared the birth rates during the daylight hours, from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m., with the rates during the 12 night hours, he did not find much difference. However, 48 per cent more births occurred around 5 a.m., than around 7 p.m. The figures were 1,632 as compared with 1,103. More babies, also, were born during the morning hours, from 3 a.m. to 11 a.m., than were born per hour in the period between 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. Dr. King found that another physician who had kept records in regard to births

The Dalles — (U) — George Welling Glover, 24, and Donald LeRoy Beard, who escaped from the Washington state penitentiary at Walla Walla yesterday, were captured here today.
