Around Hollywood

Hollywood — U.P. — Americans might expect English beauty Kay Kendall to be a "cold, haughty lady," as she fears, but instead she turns out to be a glamorous, towering and breezy import.

Kay, England's newest gift to movie-town and Rex Harrison's current love, is in Hollywood for the first time to co-star with Gene Kelly, Mitzi Gaynor and Taina Elg in "Les Girls," a supercolossal MGM musical.

U.S. moviegoers got excited over Kay when she made a hit in an English comedy, "Genevieve." After fluffing off Hollywood for years, the tall actress gave in to MGM because she wanted to work with director George Cukor.

Cold Woman Expected
 "I guess people expect the cold, haughty English lady," said Kay with a sigh. "Maybe it's because we come from a cold climate—or it's our voices. Frankly I love American voices—much more attractive than ours. Very warm. Maybe Americans think we don't talk about sex, I don't know."

Many U.S. movie fans were surprised when England turned up a bosomy sweater girl, Diana Dors.
 "So were the English surprised," cracked Kay with a wiggle of her heavy, dark eyebrows.
 Bing Crosby calls Kay "the closest thing to Cagole Lombard in personality," which is one way to describe her fun-loving, open manner. She's also been called a cross between Bea Lillie and Gertrude Lawrence.

She has big eyes, fluffy hair streaked with blonde and stands five feet, 10 inches. That's not too tall for lanky Rex Harrison, who takes a month's leave from "My Fair Lady" next week to visit Kay here.
 "But I'm the same height as Gene Kelly without heels so I guess he'll have to stand on a box," said Kay while an MGM publicist who stood by in Kay's dressing room cringed.
 English movie fans will see a new Kay in "Les Girls." She'll expose her legs for the first time in dancing costumes. She'll also make her singing and dancing debut.
