

Report on Election Practices in Portland Declared Inaccurate

Portland—(U.P.)—A U.S. Senate subcommittee report on elections which cast some doubt about the legality of certain practices employed here during the last general election, has been labeled as "inaccurate" in two very important particulars.

Gordon Orput, Portland business man, and E. B. MacNaughton, chairman of the board of the action taken by several firms as "spontaneous" and "unsolicited" by the Republican party organization.

The committee report said the First National bank and several other corporations "may have" violated a federal law by allowing the use of their mailing facilities for a Republican check on Democratic registration prior to the last election.

"The Republican organization did not solicit me, nor to the best of my knowledge anyone else," to send out letters for the purpose of checking accuracy of Democratic registrations," Orput asserted.

MacNaughton said he had determined that the action taken by his firm was taken innocently.

Orput added that the mailing of letters to registered Democrats was taken informally and voluntarily and were not made for any partisan political purpose but rather "to find out the truth of widely circulated stories of false and fraudulent registrations."

"I have never regarded honest citizenship as a partisan issue. But the Democratic organization had objected so violently to the signing of the poll books and other checks on validity of registration that I wondered if there was a reason for them to be worried," he said.

Hollywood — (U.P.)—If and when Elvis Presley becomes a soldier, he'll get a haircut like any other GI, and rumors he'll fight to keep his sideburns, he says indignantly, are "meaner 'n a hound dawg."

"People have been makin' such a big to-do about my keepin' my hair," groaned Elvis while he treated me to lunch at the Paramount commissary.

"I'm going into that service and have the rest of the boys in short hair and me in long hair. All GIs get crew cuts and I'm not askin' them to keep my hair."

"I'm going into that service and do the best I can," he added. "If they want me to sing for the boys, I'll sing. Anything they want me to do is all right."

Elvis looked disgusted when I inquired if he's keeping his side-burns and droopy ducktail for his second movie, "Loving You," a modern story about a rock 'n roll singer which he's doing for producer Hal Wallis.

"My hair is my trademark," he explained carefully. "I never meant to offend anyone with it."

When Elvis joins the Army depends on when his draft board needs a draftee.

"It might be next month, next year, or never," he said. "I don't mind going."

Although Elvis fumes when people rib him about his hairdo, he doesn't give a guitar string for the countless gags about him on television or for the many Presley satirists. Everybody from Jerry Lewis to a local striptease dancer does Presley imitations. Last week NBC's "Kraft Theater" told a tragic story about a rock 'n roll singer with sideburns and a guitar.

"Imitations are great—they make me feel good," said Elvis. "If someone does a take-off on you it's good for you."
