Constellations Encircling Earth Are Zodiac Pictures

By FAY BENTLEY
"What is the zodiac? Can you help me find four constellations in the zodiac?" This request has come from a number of Boy Scouts within the last few days.
Far out in space is a ring of 12 constellations which appear to encircle the earth. They occupy a belt of the heavens approximately 18 degrees wide, which astronomers have arbitrarily considered as 12 divisions of 30 degrees each in length. In each division is located a constellation. These 12 star pictures are known as the constellations of the zodiac.

The 12 different signs used to represent the zodiacal constellations are called the signs of the zodiac. These signs and constellations which correspond approximately to the months of the year hold great significance for people who believe that the positions of the stars and planets influence earthly events, and are "stock in trade" of astrologers and horoscope writers.

False Science
Although astrologers must be of necessity well versed in facts concerning celestial bodies, astronomers consider astrology to be a false science. Some outstanding astronomers of the past began their study of the heavens in preparation for the field of astrology, but an increased knowledge of the universe caused them to change their plans.

Closely associated with the zodiac is an imaginary path through the sky called the ecliptic, in which the sun, moons, and principal planets appear to move. Due to the earth's rotation eastward, the sun seems to travel from east to west across the sky. This apparent movement of the sun points out the location of the ecliptic. The moon and principal planets, when visible, are always somewhere along this line across the celestial dome.
Let us think of the zodiac and ecliptic as two concentric paths encircling our planet. The ecliptic, about 93 million miles distant from the earth is comparatively near, astronomically speaking.
Behind Ecliptic
The zodiac, marked by its 12 constellations, is trillions of miles away and directly behind the ecliptic. When the sun is said to be "in" one of these zodiacal constellations it means that the sun is in line with that star picture as viewed by earth-dwellers.
In other words the earth, sun, and that particular constellation are in a straight line with the sun in the middle. During the earth's yearly journey the sun will be "in" each one of the 12 zodiacal constellations.

These star groups are: Leo the Lion, Virgo the Virgin, Libra the Scales, Scorpio the Scorpion, Sagittarius the Archer, Capricornus the Goat, Aquarius the Water-bearer, Pisces the Fishes, Aries the Ram, Taurus the Bull, Gemini the Twins, and Cancer the Crab.

Visible Now
Now visible about 8 p.m. are Pisces the Fishes, Aries the Ram, Taurus the Bull, Gemini the Twins, Cancer the Crab, and Leo the Lion. Scorpio the Scorpion and Sagittarius the Archer may be seen in the morning sky.
Taurus the Bull high in the southwest, may be easily located by finding the tiny, dipper-shaped star cluster called the Pleiades. To the right of the Pleiades, and somewhat lower in the sky, is the V-shaped Hyades, with the bright star, Aldebaran, marks the face of the Bull.

A line extended from the Pleiades to a point due west on the western horizon will cross the large V-shaped constellation of comparatively dim stars, Pisces the Fishes, which lies on its side south of the Great Square of Pegasus, with the point of the V reaching southward.

Upright Piano
Returning to Taurus imagine a line from the Pleiades to a point due east on the eastern horizon. About half way between the dipper-shaped Pleiades and the horizon, the line will cross Gemini the Twins, two "stick figure" boys, who lie with their heads, bright Castor and Pollux, slightly lower than their feet. The whole figure resembles the top of an upright piano.
Low in the heavens, just to the left or north of due east, The Sickle or "question mark backwards" with the first magnitude star Regulus, at the bottom, points out the head of Leo the Lion. A triangle of three stars, nearer the horizon and farther north than The Sickle completes the body.
These four constellations of the zodiac may be easily found on any clear evening during February, outlining approximately the same path across the night sky that the sun followed during the day. As the month progresses, they will rise more and more to the west each evening.

Murder Charge Filed Against Indian

Prince George, B.C. — (U.P.) — A charge of murder was filed against a 22-year-old member of the Lesser Slave Lake Indian band Saturday for the fatal stabbing Thursday night of Charles Elkington, 23, of The Dalles. Charged in the death was Freddie Chalifoux of High Prairie, Alta.
Police said Elkington and two companions were driving down the street when they encountered a fight in which Chalifoux was involved. They said Elkington attempted to intervene in the fracas and was stabbed in the heart, arm and back.
He was rushed to hospital but died shortly after being admitted.

One Man Killed in Crash Near Hermiston

Pendleton — (U.P.) — Twenty-three-year old Charles Orrville Aldrich, of Ione, Ore., was pronounced dead at a Pendleton hospital Friday night following a one-car crash three miles south of Hermiston on Highway 207.
Police said Aldrich's car hit a guard rail, flipped over and landed in an irrigation ditch. Fifteen feet of the guard rail pierced the front of the car and struck the victim, pinning him into the back seat.
Two Ione teenagers, Ralph Piper and Robert D. Stewart, were passengers in the car and suffered minor injuries. They were released from the hospital today.

Philadelphia — (U.P.) — Allen Cameron, 50, of San Francisco, a West Coast Teamster's Union business agent, collapsed in a mid city hotel coffee shop Friday and died shortly after at the Jefferson hospital.

Cameron was in Philadelphia for a union conference. He was dining with Patrick Hollan, 60, a union official from Cleveland when he collapsed. Hollan told police Cameron had been under treatment for a heart ailment.

MHS Included In Interview Plan

Corvallis — Medford High school will be represented Feb. 16 at Oregon State college in a program of high school principal interviews with local students now attending the college.
Under the program, principals have individual, voluntary interviews with their former students on the strong and weak points in both high school offerings and the college orientation and counseling work for new students.
Review Comments
Following the interviews, principals and college leaders meet to review comments and recommendations of the students.
Picked to help schedule the interviews of students from Medford was LeRoy Wallard, route 2, freshman in science.
OSC started the interviews on an eight-school basis five years ago, but favorable comments on the program have brought continued expansion of the program, according to Dallas Norton, college personnel coordinator.
Schools Invited
Thirty-nine schools have been invited to take part in the Feb. 16 interviews and another interview day is planned by the college during spring term at the request of the Portland high schools.
Along with discussions of interview findings, the principals and college leaders will hold special discussions this year on the new selective admission program approved for Oregon colleges recently by the state board of higher education.
In two of Arizona's 14 counties, Apache and Navajo, the Indian populations are equal to or exceed the total of the white population.
