Why Some People Don't Marry

I was just reading an article by Dr. Jacob H. Friedman, Director of the Neuropsychiatric Service of Fordham Hospital. He puzzled over why so many men and women do not marry. He blames a good deal of this celibacy on unconscious phobias about marriage. He says what is true; that many people can not or will not say exactly why they failed to marry. Some probably "rationalize" things a bit, so that they cannot be sure what the cause was.

Dr Alvarez

According to Dr. Friedman, some men are afraid of picking up the responsibility of caring for a wife. Many unmarried men have told me they feared their health was not equal to carrying the extra burden. Others said they had to spend so much time fussing over their poor health that they had none left for a wife. A few had had an unfortunate experience with some woman which turned them away from the thought of marriage, and made them decide that all women are bad. A few men and women, from an insane or epileptic family, were afraid of marrying and passing on their tendency to children.

Some Silent, Moody

I have found many men who said they were too shy ever to take a girl out. Others were so silent and moody that no woman in her senses would marry them. Others preferred much to live alone. As they said, no one then was around to bother them. Rarely a man would say that he once loved a girl so much that, when she died, or he lost her to another man, he was through. A number of women said that when a fiance died they could never love again. Many men said they had had to help their mother to bring up some brothers and sisters, and when this job was done, they had lost interest in marriage. Few men ever told me what I suspected from their appearance, which was that they had been too fond of men ever to love a woman. A few men admitted they were too self-centered ever to love anyone—man or woman. Some said they had not married because of a fear of sexual indequacy. Others said they had been born with the instincts of a bachelor, and no woman would ever want to put up with their ways. When some of these men married, sometimes a wife would tell me grimly that the fellow was still behaving like a bachelor in a boarding-house.

Queer Reasons Given

Unmarried women sometimes gave me queer reasons for their failure to marry. A few said they feared a sexual life or pregnancy, and a few feared to pass on to children their bad inheritance of mental illness. Many said they had stayed home to take care of a father or mother; or they had stayed to help bring up brothers and sisters. Some after an unfortunate love affair with a man, were afraid to venture again. Some who were well educated, idealistic and "particular" said they had never been able to find a man of the type they wanted for a husband. Many educated and successful business women had been unable to find a man who could earn as much as they did.

Dr. Friedman and I both have seen non-marrying families in which as many as six or seven brothers or three or four sisters never found a spouse. I have asked such people why they had remained single, and they would not or could not tell me.

Many a woman using a Miss before her name will admit to me that once she married, but things soon went wrong. Usually, she says the man proved to be a rotter or a badcheck artist or an alcoholic, or a "mama's boy" or a "pansy." Or, because she was homosexual, she found she could not stand a man even in the house, or she found she could not love anyone, or her inherited vile temper soon broke up her marriage. Some of these women said they could not stand living in a room or apartment even with a woman.

Hate Physical Contact

Mildly schizophrenic persons commonly hate sex and any physical contact with anyone—man or woman. Such persons, when young, commonly do not date. Later in life, many marry in order just to get a home. Many homosexual men marry to get a home, and to make it look as if they were normal.

Many neurotic and hypresensitive and retiring women have told me that when they were young and perhaps in college—when they should have been getting a husband—they were too shy and too nervous and jittery to go out with a man. Some, when out with a beau, would get so nauseated or full of gass that they could not eat a mouthful of food; others would get diarrhea.

Quite a few men and women failed to get married because of some physical handicap, such as a squint, a polio arm or leg, a club foot, stuttering, or some spasticity. A few persons said they had not married because of a bad inferiority complex. Because of this, quite a few women who were decidedly good-looking had refused to go out with men of their own set.

Dr. Alvarez hopes his readers will understand that it would be impossible for him to answer requests for information or to attempt to diagnose by mail.
