

State Centennial Commission Plans To Report Tonight

Salem—(U.P.)—The Oregon Centennial Commission will report to the governor and members of both houses of the state Legislature tonight.

Senators and representatives who sponsored centennial legislation in the 1955 session invited their fellow legislators to the report meeting at which Gov. Robert D. Holmes is scheduled to speak.

Yo Plan for Fair

The commission was established to survey and plan for a "world's fair or centennial exposition beginning in 1959 to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the admission of Oregon into the union."

Anthony Brandenhaller, commission chairman, said plans for a site, exhibit building, arena, landscaping and adequate parking would be discussed.

Highlight of legislative action yesterday was a lopsided vote in the Senate to take the state out of the property tax field.

Senators voted 26 to 3 for Senate bill 92 which would prohibit levying a state property tax except to pay bonded indebtedness of the state.

Pearson Opposed

Opposing the bill was Sen. Walter Pearson, Portland, chairman of the Senate Tax Committee. He said he was opposed to a state property tax but that authority to use it was still needed as a "cushion."

Sen. Harry Boivin, Klamath Falls Democrat, said he thought passage of the bill would assure Oregon taxpayers the Legislature was trying to do something for them.

First Independent Negro Nation Due

Accra, Gold Coast—(U.P.)—Gold Coast authorities brought in 150 Cadillac and 500 tribal dancers today to kick off two weeks of celebrations marking the emergence of the British Commonwealth's first independent Negro nation.

This British colony officially becomes independent March 6 under the name of Ghana, the title of an ancient kingdom which flourished in the same area thousands of years ago.

U.S. Vice-President Richard M. Nixon and the Duchess of Kent, representing Britain's Queen Elizabeth, were scheduled to be among the dignitaries attending.

The 500 dancers arrived from the northern territories of Ashanti and practice the show they will give next week. They will perform tribal dances before an international audience representing nearly every country in the world.

The Cadillacs are an added attraction in a land where tribal chieftains signify their wealth not by the richness of their leopard skin robes, but by the shininess of their new cars.

This reflection on the relative importance of a male and female of royal birth should have the indignant attention of all those interested in rights for women. Ask your wife what she thinks of it. After all some of the greatest ruling monarchs of all time have been women. As for examples, the first Queen Elizabeth of England, Catherine the Great of Russia and Queen Victoria of England.

Next to France in what country is the most cognac consumed? It is Great Britain. The United States is second in that respect. The British do not consume cognac in a spirit of gaiety. Or for the purpose of inspiring relaxation after dinner. They use it for medical purposes. As a cure or preventive for the common cold and other afflictions caused by Britain's damp and chilly climate.
