Polka Dots Add Dash

BY GAY PAULEY
United Press Correspondent

Dallas, Tex.—(UPI)—Dots add dash to spring and summer fashions from the southwest.

Polka dots took over in everything from active sportswear to dressy town clothes in the first day of a series of shows sponsored each spring by the Dallas Fashion center.

The dots are featured in every fabric from synthetic to silk. They are natural for the short-sleeved dress, trademark of the fashion industry here. But they also appear in Capri-length slacks with waists wrapped in cummerbunds, and in mix and match separates.

Suits in nubby and textured blends have open jackets revealing sheer, dotted blouses with soft bow draped necklines.

The vogue for dots, small, medium and large, also is spotted in cape linings and in soft empire tops worn under classic or Dutch boy jackets of dress jacket costumes.

Polka dot jabots or collars perk up dark dresses for day long wear in town.

Most of the polka dots are in the black and white combination. But the 27 manufacturers participating in the center's three days of shows also combine white with navy, turquoise, red or yellow.

Dots are not confined to prints and contrasting colors. White on white shirtings have woven dot stripes and give an elegant look to a casual dress. When an occasion calls for a garden party look, there are pretty dotted swisses, eyelid embroidered cottons trimmed with velvet belts or solid and print voiles.

Five children's wear firms are to be represented in the center shows. Here, too, dots dominate. Typical costumes: for play, a polka dot middie topping a pair of white arnel shorts; for the Easter parade, a dotted swiss pinafore dressed up with satin bows.

The center's shows also represent the outstanding designs in women's and children's wear from Dallas' $185-million apparel industry. It includes more than 100 manufacturers, giving Dallas third place in the nation as an apparel production center.
