Letting Old Parents Stay in Their Own Surroundings

A woman writes to tell me that recently she was trying to get her purblind but spry old mother, aged 91, to leave her home and come to live with her (the daughter); but the old lady refused. She said she knew so well every turn in her house that she could get about easily, even without much sight; she didn't mind even firing the coal furnace!

The daughter felt she just couldn't leave her mother alone in this way, but then she read a column of mine in which I said that whenever possible the old folks should be allowed to do what they please, and that in some 85 per cent of cases they are happiest in their own apartment; so now she is satisfied to let her mother stay alone. Interesting is the mother's statement that for her there is too much confusion in her daughter's home. Even though her grandchildren are grown, they are often moving about and going

Hard To Adjust

Other grandmothers tell me that, much as they love their sons-in-law, it is hard for them to adjust to some of their behavior. One woman who used to be president of the local W.C.T.U. can't adjust to her son-in-law's habit of giving cocktail parties, or of taking two highballs before dinner. She can't get used to his Saturday night poker club, and she can't get used to his frequent talking of the Lord's name in vain. Some grandmothers cannot get used to their daughter's playing cards for money, and others can never accept the daughter's chain-smoking.

Local Jaycees Attend Meeting in The Dalles. Several members of the Medford Junior Chamber of Commerce recently attended a spring board meeting at The Dalles. Local people attending included Ron James, district vice president, and Charles Jones, president of the Medford Jaycees. The program included reports thus far for this year by state officers. James said prospects for Medford's bid for the state convention in 1958 are good. The Medford Jaycees have started planning for this project. John Gustafson has been appointed chairman of the "State in '58" committee.
