Calypso Influences Fashions

By GAY PAULEY
Various From Correspondent
New York—(UPI)—Down in the land of the wild calypso...

One of the first calypso fashions to come to market was a girl's shirt worn as Harry Belafonte wears a shirt casually...

Some of the hottest colors, and unusual combinations, come from a cotton knit wear firm, Alleen. It features a scoop neck shirt, called "Calypso," in multi-color vertical stripes...

"Slim jinx" trousers, dubbed "Trinidadians," come in solid colors, picking up one shade of the shirts. The firm also features Jamaica shorts longer than briele, shorter than Bermudas...

The full skirt, done with ruffled tiers, is another calypso fashion included in several lines. Designer Hannah Troy shows a bold yellow troy dress, with a emerald top, and a ruffled tiered skirt...

One jewelry concern, Cadoro, uses imported wood nuts to make bracelets, necklaces and earrings. The firm also uses metal painted white and worked to look like delicate wrought iron for another group...

Cotton fibers consist of about 91.5 per cent pure cellulose, seven per cent water.

Television Agent Looks For Tired, Bedraggled Housewife

By WILLIAM EWALD
United Press Correspondent
New York — (UPI) — If you're a tired, bedraggled, beat, down-trodden, neglected, worn out bank of housewife, TV is looking for you...

The man to get in touch with is Henry Brown, 44 E. 53 street, New York City, an agent who casts human being in those mid-gate TV sagas devoted to the virtues of soap, soap or what have you...

"We had a heck of a time, for example, finding a real girl with long arms," said Brown today. "We needed her for a tire chain commercial. The idea of the arms was that she wouldn't appear to be straining too much when she put those chains on..."

However, those problems pale beside Brown's present difficulty. It seems several sponsors have passed along the word to ad agencies that many of the actresses used in TV spiels don't look honest to goodness for real...

"They can't have a regional account, no sponsor will buy that. And they should feel comfortable in front of a camera, we don't want anybody who's going to freeze up," said Brown.

On live commercials, the inexperienced pitchlady can collect from $140 to $250. The rewards, of course, are much higher for actresses with reputations. TV reputations, that is.

Since word got out that Brown was scouting for housewives, he has been snowed under with letters and phone calls. "I look like the 'before' in the before pictures," wrote one lady with much excitement from Babylon, N.Y.

"I understand, sir, you are looking for a tired housewife. You can have mine," wrote an ungallant gent from Brooklyn.

"Actually," said Brown, "the women we're looking for shouldn't be too hard to find. Even if we find some who aren't so tired looking, they'll be tired by the time we finish working with them all day over a hot camera."

Portland—An outstanding musical event of this season will be the guest appearance of the renowned pianist, Artur Schnabel, with the Portland Symphony orchestra at the civic auditorium Wednesday night, March 27. Theodore Bloomfield will conduct. This will be Schnabel's first appearance with the Portland symphony.

Featured number will be Brahms' "Concerto for Piano No. 2 in B Flat Major." Other numbers include Mozart's "Symphony No. 40 in G Minor" and Ravel's "Rhapsodie Espagnole."

Date of the concert was set for Wednesday to accommodate the schedule of the world-famous pianist. Tickets may be obtained from the Portland Symphony office, 403 Park building, C-21 8-1353, and starting March 22, at the J. K. Gill box office.

This is the next-to-last symphony concert in the regular subscription series. Robert Zimmerman is conductor of the choir, which has been heard locally in outstanding choral works.
