

KEEPING THE PEACE—An army tank moves down an Havana street after an outbreak of violence in which rebels attacked the presidential palace in Havana. The Cuban Army said the attempted assassination of President Fulgencio Batista ended in bloodshed, death and failure for the handful of student revolutionaries who staged it. At least 36 persons, including a U. S. citizen were killed and more than a score wounded.

The Family Council

Editor's note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor, a women's editor and two writers. Each article is a summary of an actual report. The Family Council does not give advice; it merely reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and counselors.

Peggy F.—I want my own home.

Tom F.—My sister has nobody but me.

Peggy F.—My husband was a bachelor until 40. Two years ago, when we married, he told me we should live with his older sister until she could "get used to the idea" of his being married. Then we would go to live in our own home.

This older sister, who is unmarried, really brought Tom up. He was only eight when their parents died, and Gertrude was a mother to him—even though they lived in a foster home. She went to work as soon as she could and supported Tom through college.

I realize that Gertrude has made sacrifices for Tom, but I want to have my own home—especially now that we are going to have a baby. My husband has no right to break the promise he made me before we were married.

Tom F.—My sister has not only "made sacrifices" for me, she has sacrificed her life. She didn't marry because she was so busy planning for me and making a home for me. Now she has nobody in the world but me.

When I married Peggy, I had hoped Gertrude would realize that she must make plans to broaden her life and to set up her own apartment. Unfortunately, she hasn't been well during this time and has been unable to do this.

How can I walk out on my sister when she isn't in the best of health and has nobody to turn to? Is that a reasonable, human thing to do? Gertrude barely makes enough money to support herself. I can contribute toward her support, but she won't accept that. She really doesn't ask anything for herself.

The Council: It is a very tough thing for any man to have the responsibility for making two women happy. He will usually wind up, like Tom, with making them both unhappy.

Tom should realize it is not true that Gertrude "doesn't ask anything for herself." She is asking for a great deal, but she asks for it cleverly, under the guise of being willing to make further sacrifices for Tom's happiness. Gertrude has Tom bound on the altar of her "sacrifices." She undoubtedly meant well. She did not realize what she was doing, but with every new sacrifice she tied Tom tighter to her. She needed him more than he needed her, for she systematically eliminated from her life everything that could have brought her personal happiness and threw on him the responsibility for making her happy.

Once Tom recognizes these facts he may be able to cope with the problem a little better. Should he leave his sister alone and sick? There are many factors to consider. If she is seriously ill and needs help, he can hardly do this.

If she is in good health outside of the difficulties of the menopause, it is possible that a change in living conditions will do her good. The effort of setting up a new life and a new home, even on limited means, may pull her out of a morass of dependency and self-pity.

Tom can help Gertrude toward a new and fuller life by pointing out the many opportunities for happiness and social activities that exist in the world—outside of him. If Gertrude had this larger, more interesting life, it is even possible that Peggy would have less objection to their all living together.

On The Side

By E. V. Durling
(Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Delinquents
The juvenile delinquent situation, particularly as it concerns holdups by teen-agers, is repeatedly referred to as if it were a recent development. Nothing to that assumption. Teen-agers have been staging holdups in this country for many years. When Jesse James held up the Clay County Savings Bank in Missouri and robbed it of $70,000, he was only 16.

Not Morpheus referred to as "The God of Sleep." That's wrong. Morpheus was the God of Sleep. Morpheus was his prime minister. The profession of interior decorating was originated by the Wolf, later Lady Dand. She did not marry for the first time until she was 56.

A FITTING PROMISE
Chicago — (U.P.) — Designer Emilio Pucci soon will market a product designed for an obvious market — a pantie girdle for the "women of all sizes and shapes" who wear slacks, shorts and bathing suits.

In most states a boy legally reaches his majority at the age of 21. However, according to Nature, a boy becomes a man at the age of 15. The position of tender is rated as a "dangerous" occupation by life insurance companies. The zipper, invented in 1879, was so slowly and strongly opposed by button manufacturers that it didn't get on the market for 30 years.

Auld Lang Syne
"Big Ed" Walsh, erstwhile major league pitching star, is reported ill and badly off financially. Too many sports celebrities end their days that way. "Wee Willie" Keeler died in poverty in Brooklyn at the age of 50. "Buck" Herzog, died in Baltimore broke and forgotten. Carol Shilling, one of the greatest jockeys of all time, died under similar circumstances. If you know of some former celebrity who is up against it, let me know and I will see what I can do about it. Should auld acquaintance be forgot?

Crowds File Past Magsaysay Casket

Manila — (U.P.) — Subdued masses of Filipinos filed past the on Magsaysay today.

Some 30,000 persons had stood vigil throughout the night in front of Malacanang Palace, where the remains of the late president were to lie in state until noon Friday.

Around the flag-draped casket were wreaths bearing the names of chiefs of state. Included were President Eisenhower, Indonesian President Sukarno and the Republic of China's President Chiang Kai-shek.

Adm. Felix Stump, commander of the U. S. Pacific Fleet, is expected to arrive here Thursday to represent the United States at the Friday state funeral.

New President Carlos P. Garcia has pledged to carry on the policies of the beloved leader who died Sunday in a plane crash on Cebu Island in the Southern Philippines.

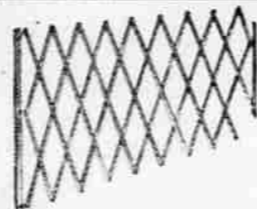

"I pledge my administration to an uncompromising attitude towards the threat of atheistic Communism," Garcia said. "We shall continue to respect our commitments for collective defense."
