Many Oregon Counties Following Jackson's Lead in Polio Vaccine

Portland — (U.P.) — A survey indicated today that only the shortage of Salk polio vaccine is slowing down polio protection for the bulk of Oregon's school and pre-school children.

The State Board of Health supplied figures showing that Oregon is in the midst of mass attack on infantile paralysis — armed with free vaccine supplies and lavish donations of time and skill on the part of private physicians and nurses.

Largest Single Battle
Largest single battle in the Oregon polio war is now being waged in Multnomah county where sponsors working in close cooperation with the county medical society hopes to reach nearly every eligible child in the metropolitan area.

county has one on planning boards with society help. Clackamas will get going later this month with some public clinics and some society assistance.

Vaccine Shortage Bottleneck
So far, the main bottleneck encountered is the shortage of vaccine. Supplies are made available by the federal government to 25 per cent of eligible groups—persons up to 20 years of age and pregnant women. Others must pay for their own vaccine at their own doctor's office. But in Multnomah county a unique plan is under consideration whereby the county chapter of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis would buy vaccine from its own treasury for free distribution of first round shots to young adults—those in the 20-40 age bracket.

On The Side

Sleep, little baby, sleep. The holy angels love thee. And guard thy bed and keep A blessed watch above thee.

Last year 11,000 members of the United States forces stationed abroad married European girls. Preferred by our boys over there were English girls. After that German girls and then French. There are 225,000 bachelors in their 20s in our forces in Europe.

Family Council

Edna V.—My husband told me to have illicit affairs. Cary V.—I had no intention of breaking up our home.

Edna V.—A little over a year ago, after a marriage of 12 years, my husband told me he was being unfaithful to me. He said he felt our marriage was not "working out" and advised me to go ahead and do as he was doing.

Now this man has asked me to marry him and I want to do so. Imagine my surprise when my husband said that under no circumstances would he consider a divorce! He says he wants to keep our home together for the children's sake, but what kind of a home can we give them under these circumstances?

Cary V.—My wife does not mention that when I told her I was being unfaithful, I also told her I had no intention of breaking up our home. I am the child of divorced parents and I know how hard it is on the children. I am willing to make sacrifices for their sake and I think Edna should be, too.

Nevertheless, I am not the kind of man who cheats. I had to let Edna know what was going on and where she stood. I felt she had a right to the same freedom and privileges I was taking. Not many men would behave as I did and I feel that Edna should have appreciated my honesty.

As a matter of fact, I cannot possibly support two households, so a divorce is out of the question. The only solution is for Edna to consider herself as free as I am.

The Council: Behind Cary's pose, in the mirror of his own imagination, of a "free spirit," a responsible father, an "honest" and fair husband is a desperately frightened man, fleeing from emotional involvement with his wife or anybody else.

Cary should get rid of the illusion that he is making any "sacrifice" for his children. He is rather using them as a sacrifice so that he can pursue his uninvolved, irresponsible affairs, with them as an excuse for not accepting the consequences of his actions. The "home" he provides for them is not only a poor one, it is not even a real one, for it lacks the emotional binder of love.

Edna faultless in this affair? Hardly. She evidently felt she was doing the decent thing by staying clear of illicit affairs and trying to occupy herself as profitably as possible. But she had the greater responsibility of trying to save her marriage and her home for her own sake as well as her children's. She is wrong to head toward the divorce court without putting up a fight for her marriage.

Edna should realize her husband needs help—her help as well as religious and psychological guidance. Her husband's ideas on marriage are absurd and childish, to say the least. Both she and Cary can profit by marriage counseling.

Texas Could Give Senate Control To Republicans in April 2 Vote

Austin, Tex. — (U.P.) — Texas could throw control of the United States Senate to the Republican party in a special election April 2.

A majority of the state's Democrats are not going to vote Republican. But the Democrats, in splitting their votes among 20 candidates, may not give any one enough votes to beat a Republican.

This would open the way for the Republicans to gain control of the U.S. Senate in Washington.

Resignation Vacates Seat
The Senate seat became vacant when Democrat Price Daniel had to resign to be inaugurated as governor of Texas. His Senate term must be filled until 1959.

The last official act of former Gov. Allan Shivers, whom Daniel succeeded, was to appoint Democrat William Blakley, a Dallas millionaire, to the job temporarily. That preserved the tenuous 49-47 hold the Democrats had on the Senate. But under Texas law Blakley must be replaced by an elected senator.

If a Republican is elected, it will give the Democrats and Republicans a tie. Vice President Richard M. Nixon can break the tie with his vote and let the Republicans reorganize the Senate.

Hutcheon Chosen
Months before Daniel resigned, the Republicans announced that Thad Hutcheon, a 41-year-old Houston attorney, would be their candidate.

President Eisenhower endorsed him and he has been campaigning as no other Republican candidate in Texas before him.

J. J. Antoine Sr., of Bastrop, entered as a Republican, but the Texas party disowned him and labeled Hutcheon as its man. The Democrats realized at once what might happen. They undertook in the current session of the state Legislature to change the special election law.

The law provides that the man who gets the most votes wins. The attempt to change the law and set up a run-off between the highest Republican and the highest Democratic candidates failed.

There are few real issues in the election. All the candidates, including Republican Hutcheon, think the federal budget should be cut.

One of the most widely-known Democratic candidates, U. S. Congressman-at-large Martin Dies, contends that he is the only man in the race with congressional experience.

Clyde R. Orms, of Dallas, was discovered to be bankrupt after he announced his candidacy. He said this was the strongest point in his favor. Since it helps him understand others in a bad financial plight.

Although Texas votes overwhelmingly Democratic in state races, President Eisenhower has carried the state in the last two presidential elections.

So Republican Hutcheson is making a pitch toward "Eisenhower Democrats." His biography, beneath a picture of his family gathered outside a modest home, says:

"He married Caroline Brownlee of Austin. They have four boys, ranging in age from 15 years to the eight-year old twins (born on Ike's birthday)."

Knight Denies Record Of Teamster Donation

Sacramento, Calif. — (U.P.) — Gov. Goodwin J. Knight said yesterday he has "no record" of any campaign contributions from the Teamsters Union and had "nothing whatever to do" with the appointment of a director of the Port of San Francisco backed by the union.

Knight's office issued a brief formal statement today in reply to testimony by West Coast teamsters boss Frank W. Brewster in Washington that the union contributed to Knight's 1954 gubernatorial campaign and the governor later got the man of the union's choice named to the port directorship.

Salem — (U.P.) — The House has voted unanimously to return to committee a bill providing for removal of indicted public officers from office pending judgment of their case.
