'Arctic Biology' Subject of Annual OSC Colloquium

Corvallis — "Arctic Biology" will be the theme for the 18th annual biology colloquium April 19 and 20 at Oregon State college with nine guest speakers scheduled to outline problems of plant and animal life in the far north.

The colloquium, which annually attracts scientists and students from throughout western North America, will be financed in part this year with a $1,500 grant from the National Science foundation. The foundation also has given OSC an additional $3,000 for the 1958 and 1959 conferences.

Dr. Henry P. Hansen, dean of the graduate school, is chairman for this year's colloquium.

Discussion leader will be Dr. Ira L. Wiggins, former director of the Arctic laboratory at Point Barrow, Alaska, and now director of the natural history museum at Stanford university. Wiggins will give the opening and closing addresses.

His opening talk will outline the discovery of the Arctic and his final banquet address will summarize potentials for future development.

Discussion topics will include Arctic agriculture, vegetation of the region, life problems, health and sanitation, population social and economic problems, and influence of permafrost—perennially frozen ground that extends from 3 to 1500 feet in depth—upon Arctic life.

Fat Field Mouse Stops Freight Train

Washington — (U.P.) — A fat field mouse possibly with a wild springtime yen for derring-do has assured himself a niche in history.

He stopped a 56-car Pennsylvania Railroad freight train single handed.

It wasn't easy. The long train slid to a halt Wednesday four miles out of the Potomac railroad yards when its engineman couldn't throw a switch up ahead.

Help was called. Shouts and alarms filled the air. Technicians probed the switch.

Fifty-six minutes later the trouble was discovered: The lifeless body of the devil-may-care mouse lay wedged between two electrical contacts breaking the switch circuit.

Back Stairs: Hagerty Not Candidate

By MERRIMAN SMITH
United Press Writer

Tucker's Town, Bermuda — (U.P.)—White House Press Secretary James C. Hagerty seemed genuinely amused by a suggestion that he be a Republican candidate for governor of New York.

Hagerty was at sea with President Eisenhower en route here when the Binghamton, N.Y. Press proposed him as the best GOP choice to run against Democratic Gov. Averell Harriman. Hagerty took it first as a joke, but when he found out reporters were questioning him seriously, his disavowals of political ambitions took on a note of intense sincerity.

Nautical Style
When Hagerty went aboard the destroyer Barton to have dinner with the commanding officer, Cmdr. Raymond Pett, photographers were lined up at the ship's rail in what they regarded as high nautical style. As Hagerty came up the ship's ladder, one of the Washington press party shouted, "Hail to the next governor of New York!" and a photographer sawed away industriously on his harmonica with "Sidewalks of New York."

The Navy went all out in efforts to show the President a good time en route to Bermuda. It is tremendous recognition in the Navy to participate in a presidential cruise. This filters down to the lowest ranking seaman who enjoys writing home to folks that his ship and even the sailor himself sailed with the President.

The Castle Harbour hotel here where the White House staff and press corps are perched will have to go some to beat Navy food. Hagerty said everybody seemed to take on weight aboard the President's ship, the Canberra, but Mr. Eisenhower himself seemed to be watching his diet, eating unusually small breakfasts.

BOMB KILLS FOUR

Treviso, Italy — (U.P.) — Four persons, including two children, were killed here when a wartime bomb exploded, police said today. Armando Nicoletti, 36, found the German-made bomb while digging on his farm. He, his two children and another farmer started playing with it Wednesday, causing it to explode, police said.

Cooks aboard the accompanying destroyers seemed determined to put their passengers ashore bulging at the seams. On St. Patrick's Day cooks aboard the Wood produced buses with green icing for breakfast.

The president took a lot of kidding from the crew of the Canberra because of his Army background. At a "happy hour" of a amateur entertainment aboard the Canberra, the bulk of song parodies and jokes dealt with the matter of having a five-star general on a naval ship. In one of the skits a sailor taking the part of a ship's captain was instructing the crew on how to speak to a president, saying "when you see the president on deck speak in a happy smiling manner and say to him, 'Good morning, Mister President.'" A sailor was then asked to repeat his instructions. He said, "I would do it this way—'Good morning Mister President, Sir.'"

This is Mr. Eisenhower's sixth trip out of the country as president. Previously he has gone to Canada, Mexico, Bermuda, Geneva and Panama.

This also is his longest absence from the country since entering the White House.
