Massachusetts High As Education Center

Boston — (UP) — Massachusetts prides itself as a center of culture and education, and well it might.

Though Massachusetts has only 3.1 per cent of the national population, its 77 colleges and cent of the national total of 1,855 and 3.7 per cent of the nation's student enrollment of 2,720,929.

The 77 institutions have a combined fulltime enrollment of 102,000 students, employ 9,299 fulltime faculty members, and represent a total value of $319,742,835 in buildings, grounds and equipment.

Seasoning
Next time you serve broccoli spears or pieces try this tasty seasoning: Sauté 1/2 cup chopped onion in 2 tablespoons butter until delicately browned. Stir in 1 teaspoon lemon juice and pour over drained broccoli. Some prefer more lemon.

Around Hollywood

Hollywood — (UP) — What has happened to pay television? Telemeter, defeated so far by "vested interests," now is teaming with theaters to bring first-run movies into homes.

For four years Telemeter, the best known pay TV system owned mostly by Paramount Studio, has failed to become a practical reality. The Federal Communications Commission, swamped with arguments against pay TV from television networks, has taken no action yet on the subject. Even a try in Palm Springs by Telemeter to operate on a closed circuit, requiring no FCC approval, flopped because studios refused to send first-run films.

A TV-Film Merger
On the theory of if-you-can't-lick-'em-join-'em, Telemeter has announced it is joining forces with moviet theaters. Telemeter now is ready to operate on a closed circuit system, not requiring FCC approval, with movie theaters piping their first-run films into home TV sets.

Telemeter executives feel this solves the problem of getting first-run movies—and also eliminates the vigorous objections of theater men who thought they'd be edged out of business.

One theater chain representing 1,000 theaters has contacted Telemeter about getting franchises. An Oklahoma City theater chain already has launched a sideline to send its movies into homes without even the benefit of the Telemeter coin box.

"We hope the FCC will give some affirmative action for a Telemeter trial soon," says Lou Novins, one of the Telemeter executives. "But as that might take a year or two to go into effect we are going ahead with this project that does not require FCC approval. We are now in business."

Via Telemeter's new system, the home customer has a coin box atop his set with slots for coins and a gadget for keeping track of his credit if he can't put in the correct change. A recorded voice announces what is playing on the pay TV channel or channels.

The films would be transmitted from a studio in the movie theater. The theater still would be open for regular patrons.

Possible Installation Charge
Installation of Telemeter boxes would be free or cost around $10, depending on what the theater decides to charge.

"Vested interests have opposed our project," Novins says. "But there have been changes in both television and movies that have brought pay TV closer to operation."

Telemeter spokesmen point out that with TV production costs mounting, sponsors cannot offer the top shows that pay TV could. However, the networks long have argued that their first-rate programs would keep the home viewer from dropping any coins in a box to pay for his entertainment.

Girl Scouts

Skate Planned
An extra skating session has been planned for Intermediate Girl Scout on Saturday, March 30, from 1 p.m. until 4 p.m. at the Rogue Valley ballroom. The first hour of the session will be devoted to those girls who are working on the skating badge, with special instruction being given by the management.

Girl Scout membership cards must be presented to be allowed to attend; each group of ten girls must be accompanied by one adult.

Flower Garden Said Possible By Working One Hour a Week

By EDNA KING MANDEVILLE

Are you one of those busy people who loves flowers but "simply does not have time for a flower garden?" If you are, perhaps I can be of help to you. I've outlined a weekly schedule of suggestions showing how to grow an abundance of colorful flowers all season long in as little as one hour a week. That's less time than it takes just to get started at most other forms of recreation, and the rewards can be far more satisfying.

You may, of course, alter this schedule to meet your own routine, but I don't believe it will be necessary to add any time to that single hour a week. Just one hour is enough to give you all the pleasures—and the unmeasurable satisfaction—of growing your own flowers.

First Week: Plan Your Garden. Your first hour, of course, should cover the actual plotting of your garden, and it can be spent with pad and pencil in the room. You should pick a sunny, well-drained spot for your garden, and to save time I'd suggest a rectangular garden the first year. My schedule allows an hour and a half for spading, so your garden can be as large as 12' by 25'. If this seems a bit too large for your first try, you can start with a smaller size. You'll find it helpful to draw a diagram of the plot and mark off rows about three feet apart, running north and south if possible. Then you can spend the balance of your hour jotting down a list of your favorite flowers.

Many Varieties
Second Week: Choose Varieties. Now is the time to take your list to your favorite store where seeds are sold. It really does my heart good to see how many stores have started selling flower seeds in recent years. Almost any of them will no doubt have one large special assortment of flower seeds only. But if there is more than one brand on sale, I find it wise to buy the brand with the most varieties, so you'll have as many as possible

X-Ray Clinic Will Be Open Thursday

More than 1,200,000 people in this country have tuberculosis at this moment," Dr. James E. Perkins, managing director of the National Tuberculosis and Health association, said recently.

These cases are both active and inactive, and they need either treatment or medical supervision, he noted. Of these cases 800,000 are inactive; and 400,000 are active, infectious cases, he pointed out.

Dr. Perkins estimated that 250,000 of the 400,000 active cases are not under treatment and are exposing others in their communities.

Regular annual x-rays are recognized as one of the most effective means of finding unknown cases of tuberculosis, he added.

A chest x-ray clinic is maintained by the Jackson County Public Health association for the convenience of county residents. Clinic hours are 2 to 5 p.m. every Thursday and 7 to 9 p.m. the first Wednesday evening of each month.

Snowplow Driver Neighborhood Hero

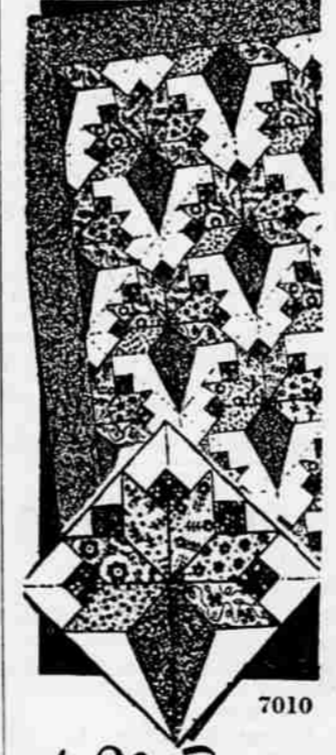

Detroit — (UP)—Douglas Diem is the hero of his suburban Detroit neighborhood each time it snows.

Diem owns a small tractor he uses to plow his garden each spring, and he loves to help people. Since he doesn't have to work in the morning, Diem gets up a bit early, dons a red hunting outfit and plows the snow from the sidewalks on both sides of his street.

"Sometimes I get carried away and plow around the corners, too," Diem said. "I love to ride that tractor!"

Diem has been plowing the sidewalks for his neighbors each time it snows for the past three years. Before that he used a shovel.
