

Quotes From the News

By UNITED PRESS

Madison, Wis.—State Sen. Leo O'Brien of Green Bay on the impending visit of Lord Mayor Briscoe of Dublin: "It's about time."

Hollywood—Carroll Baker, an Oscar nominee for her role in "Baby Doll," on losing as the best actress in the Academy Awards: "I wasn't disappointed at all. To lose to Ingrid Bergman, well."

Macon, Ga.—Air Force Secretary Donald A. Quarles in support of the $17,746 billion budget requested for the Air Force in 1958: "Failing to insure ourselves against the hazard of an atomic war is a gamble that I for one do not want to see us take."

Washington—John B. Hollister, director of the International Cooperation Administration, on the deaths of Kevin M. Carroll, Issaquah, Wash., and Brewster A. Wilson, Portland, Ore., two U.S. aid officials in an ambush in Tehran: "In the finest sense of the word, these men were serving their country."

San Bernardino, Calif.—Former Utah Gov. J. Bracken Lee urging abolition of the personal income tax: "The personal income tax grants powers to the government to go into the personal lives of its people."

Detroit—United Auto Workers President Walter Reuther answering the charge of Chicago Labor relations consultant Nathan W. Shefferman that he may have bought personal items with union funds: "It seems to me an obvious attempt to smear people who are fighting racketeers in order to cover up for racketeers."

The Family Council

Editor's note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor, a women's editor and two writers. Each article is a summary of an actual report. The Family Council does not give advice; it merely reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and counselors.

Shirley B.—I'm not doing justice by my husband and baby. Mrs. R. M.—She has always been scatterbrained.

Shirley B.—I am 19 and have been married two years I have a one-year-old baby. I love my husband and baby, but I feel that I am not doing justice by either of them.

You see, I have had no experience in house making. My mother always had a maid and didn't think it was necessary for me to do things around the house. I hardly knew how to boil an egg when I got married and I didn't learn too much before I had the baby. I like a nice home, but between the baby, the shopping and the housecleaning, I now find I can hardly get around to do all the things I'm supposed to do. When my husband comes home, I'm exhausted and irritable and the house looks a mess.

My mother comes every day to help me, but somehow we get into arguments and she nags me about the way I do things. Then a lot of time is wasted in silly talk. My mother is a perfectionist and I can't seem to do anything that meets her standards.

Mrs. R. M.—Shirley has always been scatterbrained and could never even manage to keep her own room neat. Maybe I did wrong by not training her more in homemaking, but I am trying to make up for it now. She makes it hard by flaring up and taking offense at everything I say.

I've told Shirley that it's plain she can't get along without a maid, but she insists they can't afford one. I say they must give up something else in order to have one, but that just makes Shirley angry and she says I never believed she could do anything and she'll show me she can keep a nice home than mine. I have given Shirley all the help I can and I just don't know what she's going to do when she has a larger family. Her husband does not seem at all concerned about the problem. He doesn't seem to care if she is still in a house dress when he comes in and the place is in a mess.

The Council: From both accounts, it appears that the first step Shirley should take in becoming a more efficient homemaker is to ask her mother not to come to "help" her. No word-er Shirley is irritable at the end of a day in which she has had to contend with a perfectionist mother giving her belated training.

Shirley's next step should be to accept the fact that her home does not have to look perfect or as nice as her mother's. Apparently her husband is not at all dissatisfied with the way things are going. If she can feel cheerful and pleased with herself at the end of the day, her husband will be still happier. Shirley should not accept her mother's verdict that she is "scatterbrained." It takes every young homemaker time to develop efficiency in running a home. When there is a young baby to care for, things are even harder. Every reasonable person knows this and doesn't expect a young mother's home to always be in apple-pie order.

A third step for Shirley might be to go to the public library and get out a few books on efficient home management. There are many good ones and she'll get lots of tips on organizing her time and making use of various short cuts.

Beck Condemned 5th Amendment Use

Seattle—(UPI)—Teamsters boss Dave Beck, who has invoked the Fifth Amendment repeatedly before the Senate Rackets Committee, condemned use of the amendment by witnesses who appeared before a state legislative committee in 1948.

Beck was a member of the University of Washington Board of Regents at the time. Six members of the university appeared before the committee investigating un-American activities and several invoked the Fifth Amendment.

"I have no time for that group of individuals who hide behind every technicality—technicalities which they would destroy—to hide their subversive thinking," Beck told a general session of the Western Conference of Teamsters in Bellingham, Wash., in July, 1948.

"Americans who are living the American way do not have to hide behind technicalities," he said later in his speech.
