The Medical Roundup

by Walter Alvarez

Emeritus Consultant in Medicine, Mayo Clinic
Emeritus Professor of Medicine, Mayo Foundation

LARGE LEGS

Several times in this column I have commented on the large legs that distress so many women. As I have said, they are not due to varicose veins, but to some probably inborn narrowing of the tiny vessels that carry the lymph fluid that Dr. Alvarez bathes the cells in the layer of tissue under the skin. So far as I can find, there is no medicine that does any good. The operations that have sometimes been performed are a bit dangerous, and the surgeons I have talked to were reluctant to try them.

Now, a woman writes to say that she had these big legs. She used to have a terrible time coughing, until she tried an anti-histaminic drug. This not only stopped her cough but, to her great joy, it caused her ankles to become slim again. I doubt if this will work for many people, but some can try it.

Another woman writes to say that she went to a great clinic where they told her that they knew of no way of helping her except to have her wear each day an 18-gauge rubber bandage, sometimes called a Rochester bandage. Now she puts it on each morning as soon as she gets up. She puts it over a light cotton stocking which absorbs the perspiration. With this, she is happy because her legs are not so large. If she has to go out in the evening, she takes off the bandage and the legs remain normal in size for a few hours.

Another person reports that once, when her ankles swelled badly, her doctor found she had an acute form of athlete's foot due to a fungus growing between her toes. He cleared this up with an ointment containing sulfur and a little salicylic acid and that was the end of the swelling. Another woman says that part of her swelling of the legs was due to fat. She dieted and took off 30 pounds, and now her legs are not so ugly.

Help for Cerebral Palsied Children

I recently read of a school in Los Angeles where children with cerebral palsy are being greatly helped. Many of them have to be carried in, unable to walk perhaps unable to talk, perhaps unable to feed themselves. They are often able to grunt or groan. After six or 18 months, they are sent home able to dress themselves, feed themselves, walk by themselves, and even talk.

Fortunately, many of these children have a normal intelligence, or even a better than normal intelligence. In some cases one great difficulty has been that at home the mother did everything for the handi-capped child, and as a result, the child never learned to do anything. At the school, the children are induced to play games in which they learn to do many things. For instance, a little boy is put in a sand-box and given less than a while, after weeks of shoveling sand, he is able to shovel food into his mouth.

He is given a board with holes in it, and is asked to fit the blocks into the holes. Again, in this way, he learns to use his hands and arms and fingers. He is taught to finger-paint, and this teaches him to coordinate the movements of his arms and hands. A boy will be set down before an imitation telephone switch-board, where he has to put plugs into sockets. With this, he learns how to stretch out his arms and control their movements. In order to help him to speak, the teacher may put a little tab of peanut butter on the roof of his mouth, and then get him to lick it off with his tongue. In this way he learns to make certain tongue movements which are needed if he is to pronounce certain sounds in speech.

Can a Woman Conceive After the Menopause?

Quite a few women ask when they can stop worrying about getting pregnant; will they be safe as soon as they stop menstruating? I have asked a number of obstetricians about this, and most of them tell me that child-bearing after menopause has stopped is very rare. I can remember having seen perhaps two women who conceived after they thought they had had the menopause. On looking up statistics, I find that few women conceive after the age of 45 and then most of them abort. It is somewhat dangerous for a woman to have a child after the age of 45 because there is a larger than usual chance that the child can be defective.

Dr. Alvarez hopes his readers will understand that it would be impossible for him to answer requests for information or to attempt to diagnose by mail. (Released by The Register and Tribune Syndicate, 1957)

Palladium is being used in some types of new jewelry to replace platinum. It is said to cost one-fourth as much and has the quality of being strong, light and easily workable.

Search Resumes for Object in Swamp

Sheridan, Ark. — (U.P.) — from Sheridan.

Searchers will resume their hunt for the object, possibly a plane, which was seen burning Wednesday night in a sprawling, remote swamp 13 miles from Sheridan.

After one person said he saw a plane go down in the area and several others reported seeing a fire in the same locality, townspeople, state police and Grant county sheriff's officers started a search through the swamp.

Little Rock Air Force base, 33 miles north of here, and Adams Field municipal airport, also at Sheridan, reported no planes missing or overdue. There was speculation that the object might have been a meteor.
