WAVING $128,000 IN CHECKS, Robert Strom, 10, accepts plaudits of New York television show audience after answering abstruse question on electricity. (International)

Rob Strom Faces
Problem on Taxes

Washington—(U.P.)—Ten-year-old Robert Strom, television's latest brain child, could save $21,532 if the government lets him write off in two years his $160,000 winnings to date.

But the Internal Revenue Service isn't ready to commit itself definitely on the tax puzzle.

A spokesman said the question never has come up for a formal ruling and, as usual there are two sides to the coin — if not to the $64,000 questions the bright-eyed youngster has been answering.

Rob, a science whiz kid from the Bronx, N.Y., created the stir Tuesday night when he tentatively boosted his earnings to $160,000 on TV's "The $64,000 Question." It was the largest payoff on a single program.

Hal March, the show's master of ceremonies, assured young Strom that, for income tax purposes, he could write the $160,000 off over two years. March said the youth would get his money at $80,000 a year.

An Internal Revenue spokesman said it's not quite so simple. But he "obviously was getting more good advice from tax experts."

Until the matter comes up for formal ruling, the spokesman said, the subject is "up in the air."

In the Day's News

By FRANK JENKINS

I suppose you have been reading about Queen Elizabeth's visit to Paris. (Prince Philip came along for the ride, but since this is a visit of state, he gets only casual mention.)

The visit is quite an affair. More than a quarter of a million Frenchmen jammed the Champs Elysees to view the official procession down the historic street. They started out paying the French equivalent of five dollars in American money for a place to stand but so great was the pressure of the throng that the price for standing room soon rose to ten dollars.

The queen is making a great hit. In a broadcast in PERFECT FRENCH, she described Paris as a home away from home for Britons, and the crowds cheered until the windows rattled. There's a hint there for our people. If we're going to run the world, we'd better learn to speak the languages of the world.

she actually said it, but at any rate the tale spread over Paris and hastened the day when first her royal husband, the 16th Louis, lost his head under the keen knife of the guillotine and a little later Marie lost hers in the same way.

WE COULD go on with the memories.

There was the field of the Cloth of Gold, back in the 16th century, when Henry VIII of England and Francis I of France came together in the Valley of Andren in northern France to cook up an alliance against Charles V of Spain, who was getting too powerful to suit Henry and Francis. The green of the valley was turned to gold by the silken tents and the banners of the two kings and their followers.

It was a great occasion, and the money squeezed out of the taxpayers of Britain and France was spent with a lavish hand.

WHY has the lovely young queen of England come to Paris?

I suppose that in its way, her visit is similar to that of Henry VIII. Britain and France want something. They have the feeling they must work together to get what they want.

Otherwise, why spend all this money when neither Britain nor France has any money to spare?

PTA Supports School Supports

Pendleton—(U.P.)—The Oregon Congress of Parents and Teachers, in its annual session here, Wednesday adopted a resolution calling for increase of basic school support funds from $80 to $120 per year per school census child.

The same resolution called for a revision in distribution practices of state aid but "to provide that no district shall receive in 1956-57." The resolution did not specify the method by which such an allocation could be achieved.

The controversial key district plan for allocating state funds did not go before the convention Wednesday.

Mrs. Clyde Gideon of Portland, state legislative chairman for the Congress, said Gov. Robert Holmes had told her the $120 figure could be achieved "if we work for it."

WHAT pictures that brings up out of the past!

The Palace of Versailles was built by Louis XIV, one of the great spendthrifts of all time. Versailles was his crowning extravagance. What it cost in taxes IMPROVERISHED the French, and out of their impoverishment arose the HATREDS that resulted in the bloody uprising of the French people that put an end to absolute monarchy in France.

IT DIDN'T all come of course, in a day. It was the 14th Louis who laid the foundations for France's bankruptcy. Poor little Marie Antoinette came out of Austria to become the queen of the 16th Louis. It was she who made the famous crack about bread and cake.

Told that the people of Paris were in an ugly mood, she asked one of her ministers why. "Because they have no bread," he replied. Marie is reported to have responded: "Why, the silly things. If they have no bread, why don't they eat cake?"

The historians aren't certain

Chemist Seeking New Timber Uses

Mt. Pleasant, Mich. — (U.P.)—A retired chemist is conducting a research program at Central Michigan College here, seeking new uses for low-grade timber.

Daniel I. Elder, Farwell, who has been attending classes here since 1954, said:

"This project is an effort to use low-grade timber as a chemical raw material, other than for paper pulp.

"The obligation imposed by employment and the welfare of my family, precluded experimental work on this project in earlier days, but retirement provides the leisure time necessary for devoting more entire efforts on it."

Elder retired in 1945 as a chemist for a cement company. During World War I, he developed a special cement for use in gun emplacements.

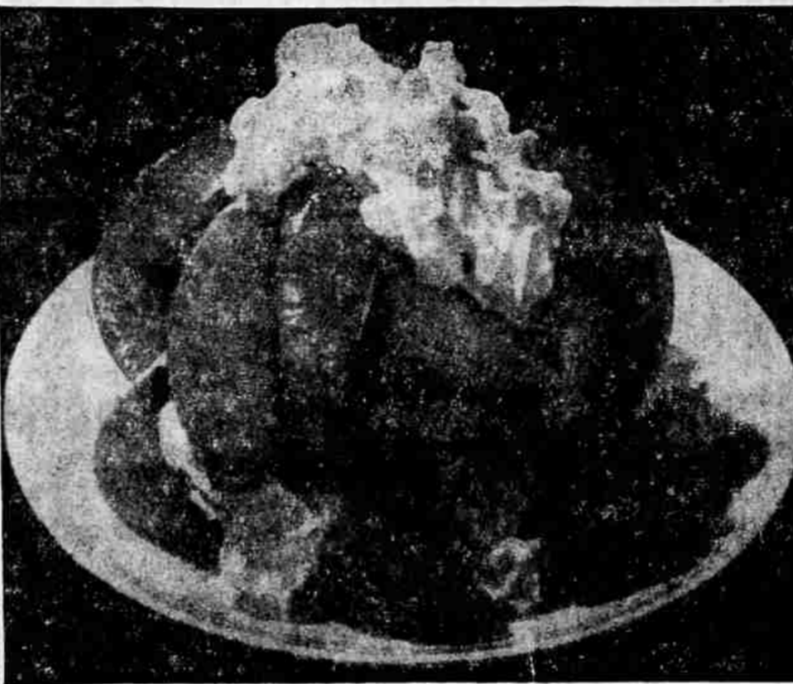

Macaroni Casserole

(4-6 SERVINGS)

8 ounces macaroni	1/4 cup chopped mushrooms
1/4 cup Fluffo	1/4 cup chopped green pepper
1/4 cup flour	1/4 cup chopped red pimientos
2 cups milk	1/4 cup chopped onion
2 cups (1 1/2 pound) grated cheese	1/4 cup chopped olives
1 teaspoon salt	1/4 cup corn flakes
2 cans tuna fish, drained and flaked

Cook macaroni 20 minutes in salted boiling water; drain. Melt Fluffo in saucepan, blend in flour, add milk and cook until thickened, stirring constantly. Stir in salt and cheese until melted. Combine remaining ingredients, except corn flakes, with macaroni. Place in 2-quart casserole which has been rubbed with Fluffo and top with corn flakes. Bake in a moderately hot oven (400° F.) about 25 minutes.
