

League Discusses Units and Finance

League of Women Voters representatives from Klamath Falls, Grants Pass and Medford met here Saturday for a study of league discussion units and finance. Mrs. Albert V. Logan, Corvallis, state finance chairman, was in charge.

About 20 women took part in the all-day session, which was held in the First Methodist church library room.

Mrs. Logan, a former state league president, explained that the league's annual finance drive gives members an opportunity to interpret their work to the community and to find out the area's views of the LWV, as well as to allow busy citizens an opportunity to assist league work through financial aid.

Concerning study and discussion units, Mrs. Logan said they provide a unique opportunity to study national and local problems with the help of informed leaders and excellent information.

The annual one-day finance drive of the Medford League has been set for May 6, according to Mrs. Robert Hiatt, president.

The group's annual meeting will be held Saturday, May 4, at the Jackson hotel with Dr. John Schleisher of the University of Oregon as guest speaker.

Speaker Urges Republicans To Study Conservation Facts

Unless the Republican party is able to convince voters of Oregon that its position on conservation and natural resources is basically the right one, "this issue (natural resources) is going to trip us up and over and over again." This was the statement yesterday of Richard Gearhart, Portland, who talked for the April meeting of Jackson County Republican Women at a luncheon at Mon Desir.

Mr. Gearhart, an employee of the Pacific Pulp Moulding company and a former national resources chairman for the Republican State Central committee, declared that the party had nothing to be ashamed of in its conservation and national resources program. He urged that each Republican arm himself with the facts about these matters in order to be able to combat the "distortions and half truths" of the opponents.

Mr. Gearhart, a graduate in forestry from the University of Michigan, formerly was employed by the Department of Conservation of that state; in 1950 he was president of the National Association for Conservation Education. The speaker said that many Americans have a deep emotional reaction to the out-of-doors and that because of this, it is difficult for them to be objective about conservation and national resource legislation and programs.

The speaker said he believed the Republican State Central committee should foster a strong information program in Oregon on these matters and that each county central committee should appoint a well qualified conservation chairman, as well.

Natural resources and their conservation present a problem of the most extreme complexity, Mr. Gearhart said, and to prove his point itemized the stories and editorials in a single issue of the Oregonian which had some bearing, direct or indirect, on this subject. They numbered about 30.

Speaking of the lumber industry, Mr. Gearhart declared that the "best managed forests for privately owned" and added that the cycle of "cut out and get out" is definitely on the wane. He said that the leaders of the lumber industry have proved that it is now cheaper to grow timber than it is to buy stumpage, and that because of improved methods in all phases of this industry it is now possible "to operate a bigger industry on 40 per cent less volume of timber." He praised the federal forest service for "showing the way" in this change-over but said he did not believe in the "federalizing" or "nationalizing" or "otherizing" of national resources.

Mr. Gearhart also spoke on the importance of the recreation angle of national resources and pointed out that money spent on such recreations and sports as hunting and fishing now runs in the billions and is growing at a phenomenal rate.

Returning to the political implications of national resources, Mr. Gearhart said that the conservation issue cost the Republican party the senatorial seat, the governor's chair and at least one legislative race in Eastern Oregon in the last election. Oregon is a "public lands" state, he reminded his audience, and added that "everybody must realize that land is one of the three basic factors of production and when land is put into federal control, that's socialism, or I don't know the meaning of the word."

He stressed that the management of all national resources should "be kept as close to the people themselves as possible," and closed by asking for an "honest and objective study of all phases of this problem."

Mr. Gearhart was introduced by Mrs. C. B. Francis and Mrs. Wayne Stine presided.

Jefferson Chorus Gives Program for Meeting of PTA

"Where in the World But in America, Can You Have So Much Fun With Songs?"

This was the theme of the repeat performance of a Jefferson school chorus program given for Jefferson Parent-Teacher association last Thursday. The show was originally presented on television and was adopted by the chorus director, Mrs. Della Webber. Narrators were Mike Watkins, Lindsey Darnelle, Mike Barnes and Viki Ingram.

A presentation of the Black Hawk waltz was also given by members of Mr. Phillips physical education classes.

The resignation of Mrs. E. H. Pesenti, president-elect, was accepted and elections for that office will be held at the May meeting at which time the officers will also be installed.

It was announced by Kenneth Hulbert, principal, that Jefferson school had won the annual Poppy Poster contest of the Medford American Legion auxiliary with sixth grader Billy Thomas taking first prize. Art direction for the school is under the supervision of Mrs. Webber.

Final plans for the rummage and white elephant sale to be held April 18 were announced and phone numbers to call for rummage pickup are Mrs. William Barnes, 3-2603 and Mrs. Fred Simcox, 2-9840. Rummage may also be taken to the vacant building next to the shell station on South 99 and Stewart Monday Tuesday and Wednesday mornings. The actual sale will be at the Fehi building, 106 North Ivy street.

Refreshments were served by mothers of the first graders.

Bayless Paintings Now on Display; Joins SOC Faculty

Benoy S. (Steve) Bayless, art instructor at McLoughlin high school who will join the faculty of Southern Oregon college next fall, has four paintings on display this week and next at Purucker's Piano house.

Mr. Bayless was invited to exhibit the pictures by Clifford Platz, Medford artist who has a continuing display of work at the store. Mr. Platz is currently exhibiting outdoor scenes done in the conventional manner, and states that Mr. Bayless' work, in the modern style, provides a pleasing contrast.

Mr. Bayless is exhibiting "City By a River," "Cruelty," "Kings," and "Three Prophets." These works strive to show expression through colors, forms, textures and lines. "City on a River," for example, creates the mood of a city at night with reflections in water. The natural forms of buildings are used as a point of departure for the invention of new forms. "The task becomes great in relating these forms and colors into a unified whole," Mr. Bayless states.

Mr. and Mrs. Bayless have purchased a home in the Valley View district of Ashland and will move there this summer.
