Key District Plan Comes Under Fire

Salem—(U.P.)—The so-called Key District plan for changing distribution of basic school funds came under fire again Monday by educators from Portland and parts of eastern Oregon who claim it would cost their areas money.

Harney County Superintendent W. W. Sargent said the bill sets up a false assumption that basic education in every district of the state costs $230 per child.

Also criticized at a House Education Committee hearing was the bill's premise that taxable property valuation is a measure of a district's wealth and ability to support an adequate educational program.

Carroll Howe, Klamath county superintendent, suggested the Legislature take steps to tap municipally-owned utilities, tap O & C funds for schools, equalize county school funds and make adjustments for differences in property valuations.

The key district formula would set Portland as the base and measure all other districts' ability to pay for the $230 per child basic educational program against Portland's.

Portland Post Office Hires Extra Workmen

Portland—(U.P.)—The post office here hired extra help Monday to tackle some 400,000 pieces of mail accumulated over the week end because of the canceling of deliveries last Saturday.

At the same time, parcel post packages normally mailed on Saturday flooded workers.

Frank Tarrant, assistant postmaster, likened the situation to a holiday rush.

$338 Collected in Easter Lily Sale

A total of $338.30 was collected by volunteer workers who conducted the annual Lily day sale Saturday for the Oregon Society for Crippled Children and adults.

Thirty-five sophomore girls from Medford High school worked on the project supervised by members of Epsilon Sigma Alpha sorority with Mrs. C. C. Peterson and Mrs. Lyman Smith as cochairmen.

Aid to handicapped children is the national project of the sorority. Last year the various chapters contributed $800,000 in cash, plus volunteer service and material gifts to charitable projects according to Mrs. R. D. McAdoo, Jctmore, Kan., past president of the sorority's international council.

Oregon chapters have donated nearly $5,000 to Children's Hospital school, Eugene, operated by the Oregon Society for Crippled Children and adults. The money is used to pay the salary for a therapist, a continuing project of the sorority for several years past.

Mrs. Peterson and Mrs. Lyman today expressed their appreciation to those who contributed and donated their services and to Robertson School of Business for supplies.

In addition Mrs. Peterson stated that anyone who knows of a handicapped child who wishes to attend Camp Easter seal this summer may contact her by calling 2-2501.

Elkins-Clark Trial On Wiretap Charges Starts in Portland

Portland—(U.P.)—A trial on federal charges of illegally tapping telephone conversations started here today against racketeer James B. Elkins and his employee, Raymond Clark. But most of the federal government's witnesses were ordered by a state Circuit Court judge to stay away from the Federal Court at least until 9:30 a.m. Thursday.

The conflict between federal and state authorities prosecuting a mass of vice indictments in Portland came on the motion of attorneys for Elkins and Clark in the Circuit Court of Judge Charles W. Redding.

Injunction Issued
Judge Redding issued a temporary injunction restraining 13 Oregon and Multnomah county law enforcement officers from appearing in the Federal Court trial against Elkins and Clark. At the same time, Judge William East in federal court denied a motion by Elkins and Clark for postponement of their trial and jury selection began at 10 a.m. today.

Elkins and Clark contend that the raid in which evidence was seized to be used against them was conducted illegally. They based their motion for a restraint of witnesses on a United States Supreme Court decision which said federal officers who had taken part in an illegal raid could not testify in a state case. Counsel for Elkins and Clark argued before Judge Redding that the reverse should apply in their case protecting the defendants from testimony of state officers who conducted an illegal raid.

Schrunk, Langley Included
Included in the restraining order were Mayor Terry Schrunk and District Attorney William Langley, as well as top officers of Multnomah county and state police.

Judge Redding said he issued the injunction for 48 hours feeling that additional time was needed, "reluctant as I am to interfere with the federal process and a trial about to proceed." He added, "there are remedies

Stockholm Suspect Said Native of U. S.

Stockholm—(U.P.)—Stockholm police said today that jailed spy suspect Robert Folke Damstedt is a native of the United States. They said he was born in Kearney, N.J., in 1929.

Damstedt, an assistance secretary of Sweden's Atomic Energy Commission, and Goestra A. T. Jacobsson, a naval employee, were indicted Monday for "grave espionage."

Police said Damstedt's father was working for an American company in New Jersey when he was born but that Damstedt was returned to Sweden when he was four years old.

The Stockholm morning newspaper Morgonbladet which broke the case Monday repeated its charge that Damstedt is under suspicion of selling nuclear secrets to Russia.

Police sources indicated the accusations included one that the men attempted to betray submarine secrets to Russia.
