The Medical Roundup

by Walter Alvarez

Emeritus Consultant in Medicine, Mayo Clinic
Emeritus Professor of Medicine, Mayo Foundation

FIBROCYSTIC DISEASE OF THE PANCREAS

Those parents of children who have cystic fibrosis of the pancreas will be glad to hear that there is now a National Cystic Research Foundation, with offices at 2300 W. Moreland st., Philadelphia. Already a sum $85,000 has been raised for the support of research on this dread disease.

Dr Alvarez

What is it? It is a hereditary disease that shows up in small children. Their bronchi, or tubes carrying air into and out of the lungs, are blocked by an abnormal secretion of mucus. Sometimes this causes obstruction of the air tubes with infection and death. Besides the lungs, the pancreas (the large digestive gland in back of the stomach), the sweat glands of the skin, and the salivary glands are involved.

A new test has just been devised in which all one has to do is to touch the surface of a specially prepared plate with a hand or foot, and if whitish discolorations appear immediately it means that there is too much chloride in the sweat. This is characteristic for children with this disease. If they haven't any excess of choride in the sweat thy are not likely to have the defect.

Some of the infants who are affected with the disease are able to live into their teens or, rarely, into their 20s. Often it is a constant fight to keep the child alive with antibiotics. Only about one child in 600 is affected by the disease. Fifty per cent of them do not survive past the age of 5 years. The trouble is transmitted by parents, each of whom carris a trace of the abnormality. In some families as many as four out of five, even five out of five, children will have the disease.

Diagnosis Difficult

So often when a child is born with this disease the diagnosis, for a while, is difficult. What the child seems to have is some bronchitis, perhaps with allergy or asthma or what is known as the celiac disease. The commonest symptoms are chronic cough with repeated pneumanias, and a diarrhea, often with bulky greasy stools. A child may have a huge appetite but may still fail to gain weight. Too much of his food goes through him undigested and hence unused.

Today, treatment consists largely of using antibiotics to hold down infections. The child is given pancreatic concentrates with the idea of helping his digestion, He may need vitamins and foods rich in protien.

Some day, all people wha are carrying a tendency to any hereditary disease should know about it. Then when they think of marrying they should find out if the loved one also carries the tendency, because, in that case, at lease one out of 4 of the children who may be born to them is likely to get the disease.

U.S. Ready to Send Aid Quickly

Washington —(U.P.)—The United States is prepared to offer financial aid quickly to Jordan if King Hussein requests American help, administration officials disclosed Saturday.

They also revealed that Israel has given a "reassuring" response to an American plea to all middle east countries to avoid action which might worsen the situation in Jordan.

Washington took a calmer attitude toward the Jordanian emergency after receiving reports that Hussein appeared to be winning his fight over forces trying to overthrow him.

Secretary of State John Foster Dulles spent a quiet day at his home without going into his office. Under Secretary of State Christian A. Herter went to Dulles' home at noon to give him a "general fillin" on foreign policy matters, including the Jordanian situation.

RHINOCEROS AILING

Frankfurt, Germany — (U.P.) — Two medical specialists were called to the Frankfurt zoo Sunday to treat an ailing rhinoceros named Catherine. Catherine, mother of the only rhinoceros born in captivity in Europe, has a high fever and is bleeding internally, the specialists reported.
