Jupiter Missile Veers; Destroyed

Washington (U.P.)—The Army Jupiter missile, given its second test last Friday, veered off course and had to be destroyed over the Atlantic.

The big missile—designed to have a 1,500-mile range—was fired while Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson looked on at the Patrick Air Force Base, Fla., testing center.

Pentagon sources discussed Monday night that the Jupiter rose to an altitude of about 18 miles and began to tilt from a vertical toward a horizontal position. They said it was destroyed because it might have fallen into the Atlantic about 40 miles from its launching point.

The Army Jupiter is in competition with the Air Force Thor to become this country's intermediate range ballistic missile.

A Thor missile was destroyed in flight on April 19 because, like the Jupiter, it deviated from its course. For safety reasons the range control officer pressed the button which activates a self-destruction device.

Demolition Crew Dismantles Building

Tampa, Fla. (U.P.)—A demolition crew today resumed the tough job of dismantling a "mined" ice plant, where someone has planted more than 150 sticks of dynamite.

Detective Capt. Neil Brown said the crew began work Monday. The Police department, Mayor Nick Nuccio and the city board all termed the Broadway Ice Co., a safety hazard.

Some dynamite was discovered March 28 by an electrician summoned to repair damages from a small fire the night before. A crew of experts from MacDill Air Force base then found more dynamite, but was not sure it had found all of it. The building has been under "around-the-clock" guard, costing the city $72 daily, since Mar. 28.

Police are still searching for a motive and for the persons responsible.

POWERLESS FLYING

Richmond, Ind. (U.P.)—An engineless craft gave an example of "powerless" flying here. Tom Ruff, 16 member of a gliding club, escaped injury, but power was knocked out in thousands of homes when his craft became tangled in high tension wires.
