Dag, Pope Talk Of War Threats

Rome—(U.P.)—United Nations Secretary-general Dag Hammarskjold discussed the threat of war in the Middle East with Pope Pius XII today in a private papal audience.

The audience was one of the longest the Pope has accorded a visiting dignitary in recent years. The 81-year-old pontiff and the UN secretary talked behind closed doors for 45 minutes.

Hammarskjold, on his way to Geneva, Switzerland, to attend meetings of several UN agencies made a special detour here to talk with Pope Pius.

Just over a year ago, on April 9, 1956, Hammarskjold paid his first visit to the Pope. At that time he was on an urgent trip to the Middle East in a successful effort to halt increasing raids along the Israeli-Jordan border.

1,600 Americans Married To Germans During 1956

Wiesbaden, Germany—(U.P.)—Lt. Gen. William H. Tunner reported Monday that 1,600 American servicemen married German girls last year.

Tunner, commander in chief of U. S. air forces in Europe, spoke at ceremonies opening German-American Friendship Week. He said the marriage statistics offered "convincing evidence" of German-American friendship.

France To Attract Foreign Tourists in Large Numbers

Paris—(U.P.)—Foreign tourists will come to France in new record numbers this year in spite of the gasoline rationing, according to Jean Boucoiran, head of the French Tourist Office.

He said France had a record number of 4,300,000 foreign tourists in 1956, an increase of 10 per cent over 1955.

"We expect to welcome some 4,750,000 tourists in 1957 since we have now managed to explain to would-be foreign travelers that they will suffer no travel restrictions in this country," Boucoiran said.

Gasoline will be sold in foreign currencies at the proportion of 25 liters (six gallons) daily to foreign tourists, he added. Special allocations will be given to those going through the country or returning home.

He denied, however, that French hotels would give a bonus in gasoline tickets to those paying in foreign currencies.

"There are no restrictions in this country besides gas, and food is as plentiful as wine," he added.

Boucoiran said he has taken steps to see that hotels have enough fuel to heat their rooms if necessary and to enable them to provide running hot water.

He said the tourist trade is bringing needed foreign currencies to the country, although last year somewhat less foreign money entered France than in 1955 owing to the black market.

"We make an average $150,000,000 worth of foreign currencies officially changed in French banks," he said, "and this is a big help for France's trade balance."

"They would also be sure that the prices would not be changed since these hotels would sign up with the tourist office to keep their prices as announced," he added.

Boucoiran said the reputation of France as being more expensive for tourists than other European countries was grossly exaggerated. "De luxe hotels all over Europe run around the same prices," he explained, "and only French second-class hotels are sometimes more expensive than similar ones in European countries."

The tourist official said the rise in the number of Americans coming to France should continue this year. Last year some 600,000 North Americans came here, an increase of 34 per cent over 1955.
