

CRISIS IN THE MIDDLE EAST—Stone-throwing mobs surge through the streets of Amman, Jordan, fighting with police in protest against the Eisenhower Doctrine and King Hussein's swing toward the West from Egyptian-Syrian orbit. The young King (right) mobilized the Army and declared martial law in an effort to forestall a Communist coup. In a half hour broadcast to his people, he blamed his nation's crisis on "Communists in Jordan who are brothers and collaborators of Communist Jews who take their instructions from Tel Aviv."

Psychologist for Whale Available

Tallahassee, Fla.—(U.P.)—A body have a crazy whale on his hands? Or a puzzled porpoise, maybe?

If so, better send for Dr. W. N. Kellogg of Florida State University. He happens to be a whale psychologist.

He has more customers than you might think. A whaling company in England, a government agency in Canada and various fishermen's organizations all have called Dr. Kellogg to answer such questions as what whales or porpoises are likely to do when they find themselves in a ticklish situation.

One of his more recent assignments was advising the Department of Fisheries in St. John's, Nfld., how it could go about luring schools of pilot whales into Newfoundland bays and estuaries by underwater broadcasts of whale sounds.

Dr. Kellogg, who directs research at the university's oceanographic institute, has spent much of his time listening to and studying the noises made by various sea creatures whales to shrimp.

One of his more important finds was that some of the higher animals of the sea, mainly porpoises and whales, deliberately make sounds in water to tell where they are.

He has decided whales and their kin knew about and used the principle of navy sonar millions of years before man discovered it. He said the big sea animals broadcast repeated sound pulses into the water and listen for the reflected echoes which warn them of nearby objects.

Briefs From the Legislature

Salem—(U.P.)—The House concurred in Senate amendments to house joint resolution 22 calling for abolition of the death penalty in Oregon by a vote of the people in 1958.

The resolution and a companion bill, House bill 355, were repassed by the House and sent to the governor for signature.

As the resolution now stands, the constitutional provision calling for the death penalty would be repealed. All penalties would be listed in the bill, rather than the constitution.

Rep. Robert Duncan, Medford Democrat, said that the two measures would still permit the death sentence for first degree murder committed while a person was already under life sentence of murder. Death would be mandatory for persons convicted of treason.

Salem—(U.P.)—The Oregon Senate passed several appropriation bills and sent them to the governor for signature.

They provide a budget of $7,898,000 for the State Board of Forestry for the coming biennium; a budget of $5,758,000 for the State Board of Health, a budget of $4,142,000 for the Eastern Oregon State hospital at Pendleton, and a budget of $9,446,167 for the Oregon State hospital at Salem.

Salem—(U.P.)—A bill providing for an Unemployment Compensation Commission of three members was passed by the Oregon Senate and sent to the House.

In its original form, the bill called for a single unemployment security commission to rule over the unemployment compensation fund. This was rejected by the Senate which also tracked on an amendment providing that all appointments to the commission by the governor be made by and with the consent of the Senate.

Salem—(U.P.)—A $4,042,200 budget for the state prison was approved by a joint ways and means subcommittee. The budget was $15,000 lower than the figure requested in former Gov. Elmo Smith's budget.

Salem—(U.P.)—A drastically altered relative responsibility bill passed the House and was sent to the governor for signature. Under the bill, some 80 per cent of the people now helping support relatives on welfare would no longer be required to pay.

Salem—(U.P.)—The House Education committee had the key district bill back in its lap for some minor clarification, but expected to have the legislation which changes the formula for distributing basic school moneys in shape for a vote at 2:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Around Hollywood

Editor's note: Aline Mosby is on vacation. Today's guest columnist, Denise Darcel, tells how Las Vegas press agents tried to make her push Zsa Zsa Gabor in a swimming pool.

By DENISE DARCEL
 Written for the United Press
 Las Vegas, Nev.—(U.P.)—Every performer who works in a Las Vegas saloon these days has to come up with a gimmick.

Opera stars Helen Traubel and Marguerite Pizza are even doing rock and roll. Lisa Kirk is taking a shower on stage and Marlene Dietrich got a lot of publicity when she made her night club debut wearing some gowns that were almost transparent.

Marie Wilson is doing a strip tease in Ken Murray's "Blackouts." Betty Hutton puts on back-face before the audience.

When I signed to appear at the Hacienda Hotel in "Can Can" the press agents for the hotel called me up and said, "Denise, let's get together and figure out a gimmick."

Romantic Interest Threatened
 A French girl doesn't scare too easily, but some of the things they suggested for publicity would have cost me my boyfriend.

The publicity man thought one sure way of topping Marlene Dietrich would be for me to be photographed wearing a diamond in my navel. "Don't worry," they said, "we can get a big zircon and no body would be able to tell the difference in a photograph." The fact I didn't even expose my stomach in the show didn't worry them.

When I turned this idea down they came up with another and guaranteed it would make headlines. Zsa Zsa Gabor, they said, would go for any kind of publicity. Why don't you invite her over to the Hacienda as your guests? Tell her you have been reading about her not wanting to shave off her hair for that movie about Stalin.

Competitor Expected to Act
 They assured me Zsa Zsa would react violently if I told her she would look better with her head shaved. "One word would lead to another," they said, and I should shove Zsa Zsa into the swimming pool with all her clothes on.

I have earned a lot of money in motion pictures and night clubs since I have been in the United States. It's not good for my morale if I will not believe I can make a career out of talent. There are too many American girls singing French songs in night clubs these days to make that a novelty. That's why I prefer to make my "gimmick" straight singing and acting role in a proven Broadway hit. "Can Can," for my Las Vegas appearance this year. It's a wonderful part and let's face it—I don't have to spend any money on special material.
