Uncomfortable Stillness Is Felt In Dave Beck's Beautiful Palace

By A. ROBERT SMITH
Mail Tribune Correspondent

A. Robt. Smith

Washington — A visit to the beautiful palace that Dave Beck built here as the Teamsters International headquarters, is very much like walking through Hollywood's famous Forest Lawn.

It's lovely in a somber, death-like sort of way.

From the outside, this marble masterpiece rivals any modern architecture in all this beautiful capital city. But on the inside, its tasteful appointments, its expensive drapes that are drawn against the slanting rays of the afternoon sun on the great panels of glass—all of it is overwhelmed by an uncomfortable stillness that one seldom finds outside of tombs.

Active Press Room

Even a fairly active press room that has just been established on the second floor to accommodate newspapermen, complete with chattering news tickers, fails somehow to penetrate the solemnity of the place.

The men who have been hired to man this Teamster publicity bureau, all of them ex-newspapermen of considerable repute, are doing what they can to shatter the gloom. Their efforts are the first fruits of the public relations campaign Beck's union has belatedly launched since the Teamster boss and certain of his top subordinates have become entangled in the coils of the U.S. Senate and the law.

A month ago, a reporter trying to get legitimate information from the Teamster headquarters, was shunted from one officer to another, each passing the buck ad infinitum rather than admit they couldn't provide answers.

Answer Quicker

The three-man press staff now on duty for the Teamsters doesn't come up with any more positive information in response to the vital queries of the day—such as where are Beck's associates hiding out from Senate investigators — but a reporter gets a negative answer quicker, at least.

The general pitch of the Teamster public relations campaign, run by an expert of the craft, David B. Charnay of New York, is that the criticism of the Teamster officials is motivated by broadscale anti-union interests. In other words, their effort is to convince anyone who will believe it that the Teamsters' enemies in their current troubles are the traditional enemies of all labor and all working men.

Originally, Beck had declared that he would launch a $1,000,000 "truth campaign" to tell his side of the story, right after he passed up a two-day opportunity to do it for free before the Senate racketeering committee where he had a TV audience. But Teamster Secretary-Treasurer John F. English, the man who has prevented the union treasury from being tapped by Beck for a payment covering the luxurious furnishings in his Seattle residence, threw cold water on this by saying that he wouldn't approve the funds. The result was a compromise figure of $200,000 annually, which could be extended into a five year program if the Teamster convention approves it.

Go Out Window

The whole program could go out the window with Beck at the September convention, if the members are in a mood to revolt.

Charnay's press agentry has been successful in the past, in the view of those who hired his firm, Allied Industrial Relations Consultants, Inc. Among those was John L. Lewis, turbulent head of the United Mineworkers, back in the days when he was casting a plague on many houses.

But Charnay isn't only a labor promoter. Indeed, some labor officials here have raised eyebrows over the fact that he sees no conflict of interest in the fact his firm also represents a truck employer group, the Eastern Highway Transport conference.

It will take some doing to extricate Beck from the public's doghouse this month as he faces his accusers once more in the Senate and the AFL-CIO.

IT'S NEW TO THEM — Three jockeys who have never ridden in a Derby have an enthusiastic chat about the big race between regular races at Churchill Downs, Ky. Left to right: Ralph Neves, who will ride Round Table; J. R. Adams, who will be aboard Shan Pac, and Willie Carstens, who will be up on Federal Hill. Adams was thrown May 2, but is still expected to ride in the Derby.

SURRENDERS — Teamster President Dave Beck wears dark glasses as he leaves Federal Court Bldg. in Washington after surrendering voluntarily to the United States marshal and posting $5000 bond on federal income tax evasion charges.

NOTHING VENTURED!

Washington — (U.P.) — Smithsonian Instititution scientists, tired of wondering how Florida's Seminole Indians have predicted hurricanes as much as a month in advance, asked a Seminole weather prophet for his secret, according to a report issued today. "Moon tell me," the Seminole said, and the scientists went back to wondering.

AN ALARMING DREAM

Hipston on Stour, England — (U.P.)—Fire engines roared off to rescue a woman who said she was surrounded by smoke and flames. But there was no fire. The woman had dreamed it and placed the alarm in her sleep.

California Found Crowded; Group Goes To Tahiti

Sacramento, Calif. —(U.P.) — Who says there's no way out for those fed up with city noise and crowding? Not Herb Kurtz.

The 45-year-old civil engineer recently decided California was "too darn crowded." Many would resign themselves, but Herb just up and took off for Tahiti—to try and buy an island.

To accomplish this, he held talks with the governor of French Oceania to discover which of the isles in the Tuamotu Archipelago group were available for lease or sale. Final reports aren't in yet.

When he left Sacramento, he went alone. As soon as the land problem is settled and a house is built—a house put up by Herb himself—his wife is going to join him. And they've talked four other local couples into going along, thus setting up a colony on the island.

A Surveyor

Is Herb going to go native? Well, at least part of the way. The dwelling will be a hut. But food problems will, in part, be solved with the most modern packets of vegetable seeds, presented to the adventuresome guy by a city seed firm before he left San Francisco aboard the New Zealand steamship Waitomo.

Herb thinks he'll be able to take at least some of the vittles out of his dream isle's rich resources.

"I think I'm bush-wise," he said. "I've spent years surveying for the federal government up on the Canadian border."

He isn't taking anything for granted, though. If the Tuamotu deal falls through, he plans to go south to Rapa Island in the Tubuai Archipelago and try again. The whole area is semi-tropical with a year-around temperature of some 72 degrees. There are plenty of wild boars, vegetation and fishing.

Loves Nature

How about cost? Herb expects he'll be able to lease a 10,000-acre island for $250 every 10 years. And it took only $1,260 to outfit himself entirely for the extended jaunt.

His traveling equipment included first aid materials, including drugs and antibiotics, guns, fishing gear and all the odds-and-ends it takes to put together a 10-person village. All this was packed into three over-sized wooden crates.

Kurtz pointed out that his "big move" isn't anything against his home state at all.

"I love California," he explained, "but it's just getting too crowded."

And this is no travel poster-inspired whim, for Herb said he'll stay on the island "for the rest of my life if everything works out all right."

What personal philosophy moves a man to leave everything he knows and seek to make a home in an undeveloped foreign spot?

"If a person didn't understand and love nature, he'd hate it."

San Francisco Taxidermist Supplies Witch Articles

San Francisco — (U.P.) — Bat blood, angleworm oil and poisoned toadstools are the stock-in-trade of Roy A. Heist, a pleasant 75-year-old taxidermist who doubles on the side as a witch doctor's supplier.

Heist, born in Northeast, Pa., looks as if he'd be more at home in the vestry of a country church than in the head-hung upstairs studio he shares with a pair of prowling cats.

Sitting complacently beneath the staring eyes of dusty stuffed animals, Heist looks out with good clear blue eyes and runs down the list of things he has on hand.

"I've got tiger claws, elephant hair, bat's blood, crocodile teeth, hyena tails (I'm saving one for a witch doctor), shed snake skin, bear's gall (they all want that) and a lot of other stuff."

A man of many hobbies and talents, Heist lends a hand to restoring oil paintings and repairing china and has an antique shop below his studio. But his abiding interest is in "the old, the odd and the curious."

No Alligators

Gesturing at the jars neatly labeled as holding cobra skin, shark teeth, eagle blood and dried tarantula, Heist said, "I don't believe in any of this stuff.

"I'm here to sell and my customers are here to buy," he added. "It's their funeral, I say."

Among his customers the taxidermist numbers several women witch doctors, a voodoo man of the South Seas, a snake cult priestess and a lot of people with just odd fancies.

While he was talking about his customers, Heist's front door opened and in stepped a young man in a faded Army jacket with a proposition involving a dead alligator. He wanted Heist to skin the animal, keep the skin for his trouble, return the skeleton and throw in a couple of gorilla skulls. Heist turned the proposition down, remarking:

"Alligator skins frankly are a drug on the market these days.

"You get all kinds," he continued. "Some of them want wildcat meat and some want fresh bear claws. I even have a customer who'll take rhino horn, all of it I can get. He sells it as unicorn horn, you know."

HE LIKES TOBACCO

Cobh, Ireland — (U.P.) — Philip Richland of Miami, Fla., has been ordered by customs officials to appear in court Tuesday to explain his liking for tobacco. Authorities said luggage which he asked be stored in a customs shed contained 286 pounds of cigars, 68 pounds of cigarettes and nine pounds of snuff.

LINGUIST LASSIE

Hollywood — (U.P.) — Lassie soon will be barking in more languages than any other animal actor. The Lassie TV films, now available in English and Spanish, soon will be "dubbed" in Italian, Japanese, French and German, according to the show's owner, Jack Wrather.
