

Multnomah Jurors To Pass Up Invitation

Salem — (U.P.) — Sen. Warren Gill, Lebanon Republican, said today that members of the recent Multnomah county grand jury had decided not to accept an invitation to appear before the Senate Judiciary committee tonight.

Gill said Edwin Dewitt, foreman of the grand jury, called him late Tuesday and said he and other members of the jury did not desire to testify before the committee.

Gill's committee is studying proposed changes in criminal procedure laws.

American Dancer Hopes To Win Russian Friends for America at Moscow Affair

Washington — (U.P.) — A pretty blond ballet dancer said today she and a group of young Americans hope to win friends for the United States this summer at the International Youth Festival in Moscow.

The ballet dancer—23-year-old Barbara Perry of Chicago—said about 500 young Americans already have written to her organization saying they want to attend the bi-annual, Communist program.

Miss Perry announced Tuesday the Russian Embassy has agreed to issue 45-day "special participant cards" instead of visas to Americans planning to attend the festival in Moscow July 28 to Aug. 11.

She announced the agreement after an all-day conference at the embassy. She talked for half an hour with Soviet Ambassador Georgi N. Zaroubin.

Miss Perry, the secretary of the United States Youth Festival Committee, said the Russians promised to supply the cards within a week after she provides the names of the Americans who will attend the festival. She said it usually takes eight to 12 weeks to get a Russian visa.

The hazel-eyed dancer and public relations specialist planned to ask the Polish Embassy today for visas permitting the Americans to pass through Poland.

The state department is granting passports to Americans who want to attend the festival but has announced it is not "encouraging" attendance because it fears the Russians will use the American contingent for propaganda purposes. More than 35,000 young people from 120 nations are expected to attend.

Former Medford Man Awarded Fellowship

Dr. George A. Coddig Jr., formerly of Medford, has been awarded a Guggenheim foundation fellowship for a year's study in Europe, it was learned here this week.

Dr. Coddig, an assistant professor of political science at the University of Pennsylvania, is the son of Mrs. Maude Coddig, 1015 Queen Anne ave. His late father was a well-known Medford attorney.

During his year's travels in Europe, Dr. Coddig will work on a book on the Universal Postal Union. He will be accompanied by his wife and small daughter. He has been at the University of Pennsylvania for the past three years, and will return there after his fellowship year.

Methane Gas Deposit Found in Belgian Congo

Leopoldville, Belgian Congo — (U.P.) — Engineers have discovered a methane gas deposit with heat-producing potential equal to 50 million metric tons of coal beneath the waters of Lake Kivu.

A pilot station will be set up this month to test commercial extraction of gas from the deposit.

Correspondence Course Pays Off for Father

Steinwende, Germany — (U.P.) — A Mississippi airman who took correspondence courses on child-birth delivered his own son Tuesday.

Airman 2-c Violey Fryou of Gulfport attended the birth after he discovered it was too late to get his wife, Joy, to a hospital.

University Dean Credits Newspapers

Eugene — (U.P.) — Charles I. Duncan, dean of the University of Oregon journalism school, said the editorial support of Oregon newspapers was a big factor in the effort to raise faculty salaries in the state system of higher education.

Duncan told the American association of University Professors that Oregon newspapers, in their support of salary increases for faculty members, "performed a significant public service." "Higher education in Oregon was in dire peril and they minced no words about it," he said.

RECLAMATION MEET SET
Salt Lake City — (U.P.) — Western power and reclamation leaders will meet here Friday for the opening of a two-day western states power and water conference.

Costello Jailed For Refusal To Give Jury Story

New York — (U.P.) — Gambler Frank Costello was packed off to jail Tuesday night for refusing to tell a grand jury about an attempt on his life and a scrap of paper that may be a clue to a gambling empire.

Costello, who was nicked by a would-be assassin's bullet last night, was sentenced to 30 days in the workhouse for refusing to cooperate with a grand jury investigating the shooting. At least part of the reason for his refusal, he indicated, was the Bureau of Internal Revenue, a number one bugaboo for gamblers.

Alarm for Killer
Police, meanwhile, spread a 14-state alarm for Costello's would-be killer, described by witnesses to the attempt as a hefty six-footer with slicked-down hair who waddles when he walks.

The scrap of paper that prompted a barrage of police and grand jury questions required little guesswork as to its nature. It was found in Costello's pocket as he was being treated for a scalp wound made by the gunman's .38 caliber bullet and read:

"Gross Casino wins as of 4-26-57 $651,284. Casino wins less markers $435,695. Slot wins $62,844. Markers, $153,745. Mike $150 per week. Jake $100 per week. L. $30,000. H. 9,000."

Las Vegas Tie Hinted
Police said the note apparently alluded to gambling profits, possibly from a Las Vegas casino in which Costello is rumored to have an interest. The term "marker" is gambling slang for an I.O.U. The possibility was raised that the attempted killer might be someone who owes Costello a large sum of money, or a gunman hired by such a person.

Police put little stock in Costello's claim that the gunman was "a punk trying to get a reputation" in the underworld.

Spanish Emigrants To Depart for Canada

Madrid, Spain — (U.P.) — The first official emigration of Spaniards to Canada will begin May 12 when the first of 262 migrants will be flown to Montreal, it was announced today. Others will follow later in the month to GENERAL FEATURES CORP., settle in Quebec Province.

Wage and Salary Employment Mounts

San Francisco — (U.P.) — Wage and salary employment on the Pacific Coast, excluding domestic and agricultural workers, increased 26,400 from February to a total of 3,644,500 in mid-March according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

The monthly gains of 10,800 in California and 2,000 in Oregon were somewhat below February-March increases of recent years, the bureau said, but the Washington increase of 13,600 was normal.

Lumber and food processing began their seasonal upswing, as did service and trade, the bureau said. Aircraft construction continued to expand.

Offsetting this was a decline seasonally in construction largely due to an unusually wet March in Oregon and Northern California and to a general slowdown in residential building.

The Family Council

Editor's note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor, a women's editor and two writers. Each article is a summary of an actual report. The Family Council does not give advice; it merely reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and consumers.

Mathilda S. My husband has no spunk.

Harry S. The boss is a good guy.

Mathilda S. My husband and I have been married 15 years and have four children. During the entire time of our marriage he has worked at the same job in a local store. He works long, hard hours for small pay and we have had a very rough time of it.

I am a good housekeeper and know how to stretch the dollar, but I don't think it is necessary for things to be as bad as they are. My husband will never talk up for extra pay. For example, at the end of the day he makes several deliveries to customers. This brings him home half an hour to an hour later than he should come. I say this is part of his working day and he should get overtime for it, but he won't ask.

Recently he was quite ill. His boss offered to pay a few of the doctor bills, but Harry turned him down. This is going too far. I don't know why my husband has so little spunk.

Harry S. My wife thinks I have no spunk, but the fact is that I have too much spunk to want to accept charity from my boss. A doctor's bill is a personal expense. I want to pay for it myself. It would be different if I had been injured on the job, but I wasn't. I don't want any handouts.

My boss is a good guy. I know that business hasn't been too good. If he could afford to give me more, he would.

My wife thinks the boss is a slave driver, but the truth is that he's very considerate. He's always telling me not to rush around so much if I want to live long. He gives me a couple of coffee breaks a day. He never says anything if I make a mistake.

I know I've contributed a lot to the business. Many customers insist that I wait on them. It seems to me that the boss ought to recognize this without my telling him.

The Council: There is a slave driver in this picture, but it isn't the boss. It's Harry himself.

Harry seems to have gotten into a childish personal relationship with his boss. He is fearful, resentful and dependent. He insists that the boss would pay him more "if he could afford to" and points out that the boss is kind and considerate of him. Yet he shows resentment when he says that the boss ought to recognize what he has contributed "without my telling him" and when he spurns the boss' offer of help in an emergency.

Harry sees the boss as Daddy. He is more concerned with trying to please him and make a favorable impression on him than with simply putting in his day's work to make a living for himself and his family. He naturally resents the humiliating position in which he has placed himself and his anger expresses itself in ways which are only damaging to himself—like turning down the offer of help with a medical bill. The boss, it appears, is making some effort to be fair to a man who is determined to punish himself.

It would be very difficult for Harry to pull himself out of this unfortunate, long-term relationship, but he should make the effort to see his boss as an ordinary employee. If he feels that he deserves more pay or could make more elsewhere, he should lay it on the line.

If the boss can't pay him more, he'll let Harry know. Harry may be worth much more than both realize. It will give him new incentive on the job if he can win both self-esteem and respect from the boss in the solid form of a bigger pay check.
