

Knowland Continues To Ask Budget Cuts; Nixon Lends Support

Washington — Senate Republican Leader William F. Knowland, unswayed by a softening among some congressmen toward President Eisenhower's budget, today stood by his statements that federal spending should be cut $3 billion.

But Vice President Richard M. Nixon, in one of his few policy speeches this year, jumped into the budget battle Thursday night with a strong defense of the administration's money requests.

The President also picked up some top level GOP support in the House on his foreign aid program. Speaker Sam Rayburn (Tex.) and Democratic Leader John W. McCormack already had lined up against meat-ax cuts in the program. Rayburn has predicted the house would be fairly generous in acting on the $3,865,000,000 foreign aid request.

The Fight Credited
Some congressional quarters credited Eisenhower's new all-out fight to save his budget with helping to blunt the economy drive.

In other budget developments: The House opened debate on the defense budget which has been trimmed $2,587,000,000 in committee. The House was expected to go along with the cuts despite Eisenhower's objections to the reduction. The vote was expected to come next week.

CHOCOLATE-VANILLA-COCONUT CREAM BUTTERSCOTCH

—The Senate Appropriations Committee summoned Army Secretary Wilbur M. Brucker and Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, Army chief of staff, for testimony on the $36,200,000,000 military budget. Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson urged the committee Thursday to oppose the House cuts. He said they were an "unwise gamble" to take with the armed forces.

—Assistant Defense Secretary Mansfield Sprague went before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee to defend the foreign aid program. Foreign aid chief John B. Hollister said Thursday the program is necessary for the United States to maintain its free world leadership.

—The House Rules Committee Thursday cleared for floor debate a bill which would result in about $420 million more in foreign aid without charging a cent to the administration's aid budget. The bill — a farm surplus disposal act under which federal surpluses are sold for foreign currencies — would charge the costs to federal farm programs.

Knowland Persistent

Knowland called again for clipping $3 billion from the budget despite Eisenhower's downward revision of his foreign aid request by more than a half-billion dollars. Even with the lesser aid request, he said, "I think the budget still can be cut by $3 billion."

Nixon said in New York the outlook for the administration's program in Congress has "substantially improved."

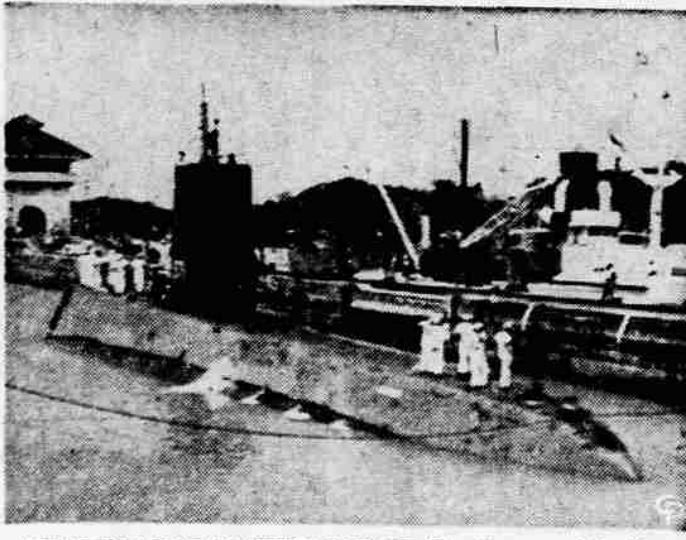

"Unless Congress decides to discontinue domestic programs it has previously approved, budget cuts as high as $5 to $6 billion, which have been suggested, cannot be made unless the items for national defense are substantially reduced," he said.

But Nixon warned that the "present tax level, if continued indefinitely into the future, could seriously weaken the economy."
